SLATED FOR HIGH-DENSITY DEVELOPMENT: The Val Verde area in lower Carmel Valley seems headed for high density development as the Board of Supervisors voted last week to approve a change in zoning to permit the construction of a 45-unit cluster development on the 7½-acre site in lower left of this photo. This view is looking south. Carmel Valley Rd. is at bottom of photo and Val Verde Rd. intersects. The Odello artichoke fields (top) are also slated for future development. For full story, see page 3 (Aerial photo by George T.C. Smith, courtesy Carmel Valley Aviation).

Letters to the Editor

Letters to the editor are welcome. While there is no limit on the number of words, please write only enough material to adequately cover the subject. Anonymous letters are not acceptable, although names may be withheld on request.

Dear Editor:

On Jan. 12, 1971 the Monterey County Board of Supervisors, by a 3 to 2 vote, approved a high density rezoning for 7 acres of land near the mouth of the Carmel Valley at the Southeast corner of Val Verde Drive (a private road), between Carmel Middle School and the Carmel Rancho shopping center. The density for this tract was increased from 1 residential unit per acre to 6 per acre.

This approval ignored opposition from many citizens and organizations including the Carmel Citizens Committee. We are convinced this population density increase is detrimental. It violates the intent of the Master Plans for this area, and is contrary to the chosen basic rural character of the community.

Of course we were all too complacent. We thought the turn down by the Supervisors of the same request several weeks earlier would be repeated. We thought that the march toward high density in the remaining 400 plus acres at the mouth of the Valley had stopped.

How wrong we were! The trend continues. We are one more step toward a Santa Clara Valley type disaster.

How can this trend be stopped? Apparently the only way is by an aroused and vocal citizens protest. We all must maintain awareness of public hearings held by planning commissions, city councils and county Supervisors. We must write letters, make telephone calls and speak up at public hearings.

The subject of subdivision density will be discussed at the Annual Town Meeting of the Carmel Citizens Committee which will be held in the Parish Hall, All Saints Episcopal Church, Lincoln and 9th, Carmel, on Tuesday evening, January 26, 1971 at 7:30 p.m.

All are cordially invited.

Very truly,
C.W. FISHER
President
Carmel Citzens Committee

Dear Editor:

How could you, Supervisor Branson, have so changed your stand between last August and last week, that you could approve the drastic shattering of the one-dwelling-per-acre zoning which had existed for so long in the open-field area just east of Val Verde Drive and just south of Carmel Valley Road?

How could you have found it in your heart to accommodate an out-of-town developer—one Tom Gamboa of Arbor Development Company from Mountain View on the San Francisco peninsula—who wanted last August what you didn't think he should get then, and who wanted essentially the same thing last week when you moved to grant it to him? And what was it he wanted? Six-dwelling-units-per-acre on the seven-and-a-half acres located at the intersection of Val Verde and Carmel Valley Road. Six times as many units, Supervisor Branson, as long-existing zoning would have allowed.

How could you, Supervisor Branson, when you knew as you said "If we grant this, we will set a precedent," still move to approve the Gamboa request—essentially the same one as you would not approve at last August's earlier hearing on the request?

How could you apropos of your recognition of the precedent-breaking character of approving the Gamboa request, so callously say "...but so did man when he build the first house" since there is already so much unnecessary and unused small-lot zoning in the nearby Carmel Rancho area?

How could you so disregard the ardently expressed wishes of the people actually living in the Val Verde area, who only asked you to leave things as they have so long and so happily, been? Especially when, as it turned out, you would have had the support of two of your fellow supervisors, and could clearly have won, since those supervisors (Warren Church from North County and Ellis Tavernetti from King City) evidently intended by their votes to support "what the majority of the people in the area want."

How could you when there was so obviously no pressure of population in the area, have seen any slightest public need to give Gamboa, or the distantly situated development company he represented, the zoning advantage which he had done nothing to merit?

How could you have so disregarded the flood-plain peril—at the edge of which these newly rezoned acres are situated—that you could not even have waited until the definitive Corps of Engineers study (for which funding has just become available) would be completed, before thinking of granting any more small-lot zoning in the whole endangered Carmel River area?

And finally, Supervisor Branson, how could you—in view of your long and often expressed concern for conservation of treasured rural elements of the Carmel River environs—have done what you did at last week's Board of Supervisors meeting, when your motion and your vote, led to the crashing downfall and just by a 3-to-2 vote, of so many hopes of so many who have stood with you in other conservation efforts—even at just last August's efforts when your motion and your vote staved off the then looming zoning doom for the beautifully rural Val Verde nook for which, last week, you may have sounded a death-knell.

Dear Editor:

If we will just use numbers we shall find that the Carmel Treatment plant, when fitted with a primary process and the State recommended outfall and diffuser, needs secondary treatment about as much as route No. 1 needs another Golden Gate Bridge to cross the Salinas River.

The present average daily effluent of 1.2 million gallons when flowing in a 10 inch diameter pipe will move at a leisurely 2½ miles per hour. This is a piddling little trickle compared with the size of Carmel Bay or with other coastal discharges. The Bay, landward from a line from Pescadero Point to Point Lobos has a volume more than 100 times greater than the year-long accumulation of the present effluent.

The absence of industry in this Sanitary District assures freedom from meaningful contamination by heavy metals, radioactive substances and chlorinated hydrocarbons that have been shown to accumulate in organisms of the aquatic biota. A detailed chemical analysis of the Carmel effluent is available in the CSD offices.

When this effluent is released in seawater it is essentially fresh water. It is buoyant and rises toward the ocean surface, mixing as it goes. This source of dilution coupled with jet mixing from the diffuser discharge ports and the stirring action of wave, tidal, upwelling and wind driven currents between the bottom at the proposed depth of 150 feet and the ocean surface will be very thorough. At the Orange County diffuser where the discharge is about 250 times as great and the depth nearly the same the diffuser is designed by a Cal Tech Hydraulics Professor for a mixing factor of 200 to 1. A depth of 150 feet can be reached here more easily than in most locations.

Alongshore drift currents parallel the whole seacoast. They need to be scarcely detectable to cause change of the water in open bays like Santa Monica, Monterey and Carmel. This drift is evidenced in the dye tests already conducted locally. A current along the coast amounting to only five feet a minute, about 1/20th mile per hour will move the ocean water body past the gap between Pescadero Point and Point Lobos, a distance of 13,000 feet in two days insuring a change of bay water every few days. Another Cal Tech professor who is an experienced science diver says that the drift speed is probably more than 1/10th mphr.

There is nothing that secondary treatment can do that ocean water can't do better given a reasonable amount of mixing and time (about 2 days). Even with secondary treatment we usually depend on the sea to finish the job. The coliforms and pathogens in sewage cannot survive in seawater and one can be sure that the tiny trickle (even if three times the present amount) when properly mixed will never be detected by aquatic plants, animals, or man.

The present discharge from the treatment plant is about 1,400 acre feet per year. The Cal-Am Water Co. distributes about 14,000 acre feet per year over the whole peninsula and including the golf courses. After allowing 10,000 af/yr to flow in the Carmel River bed to keep it green the River still wastes an average of about 50,000 af/yr into the ocean through Carmel Bay.

Reclamation by distillation, a process that is required by health authority, and using existing technology is very expensive. Why should we even consider recycling 1,400 acre feet of effluent when 50,000 af/yr of perfectly good fresh water is wasting into the Bay from the River. If, a generation hence, the requirements change we can be sure that better processes will be available.

Some will contend that we should not deny to the marine food chain the nourishment that is in the effluent. But the amount of nourishment that is available from this source is insignificant compared with the production from hundreds of millions of marine animals, including a great many warm blooded mammals, that practice defecation without the benefit of even primary treatment.

Dear Editor:

. I am in receipt of a copy of the Carmel Pine Cone, dated Nov. 5, 1970, Vol. 56, No. 45, from my sister who received it from a friend who is a native of Carmel.

This issue brought back many memories. Fifty years ago I spent a Winter in Carmel with my folks. I went to Monterey High by bus and after school and weekends worked for "The Pine Cone." At that time it was owned, I think, by Bill Overstreet. He taught me how to set type, read type, run the job presses and help with the flat bed press which then printed the Pine Cone. Of course, I also kept the shop clean. I also remember an old character, who set type, by the name of Bill Nye, he said he used to work on the best of the San Francisco papers.

In your column "50 Years Ago" you mention the Presidential Election. I remember going to some ones house who had a radio, ear phone type, this was my first encounter with radio. We heard the results of the election. At the same house I was introduced to an old gentleman by the name of Joe Hand, he said he once rode the Pony Express.

You also mention "The Misses Culbertson and Johnson." These ladies had a "Boys Club" which met once a week. We played cards, games and their snacks were super.

The following Winter we again returned to Carmel and again to Monterey High. That Winter Bill Overstreet had a full crew so I did odd jobs at the La Playa Hotel, also a private school and various homes where they needed window washing.

Since that time I finished school, raised a family of four, have eight grandchildren and am now retired.

This Summer we are planning a tour with the American Association of Retired Persons which starts in Los Angeles and will spend a night in Carmel. I imagine I will see many changes in your city.

Thanks for letting me take up your time with my reminescences.

Sincerely,
PRESCOTT B. MORSE

Dear Editor:

Your last issue carried a very well written article concerning the anticipated tree planting on Dolores, south of Ocean.

However, the last small paragraph mentions a very disturbing idea: placing the trees in planter boxes to sit on the edge of the sidewalk. Disturbing is too mild. It's revolting!

It has been my pleasant experience on a number of occasions, in escorting friends about our precious little town, to hear them remark with surprise and delight in running into those lovely pine trunks, right in the sidewalk, near the post office entrance. That's Carmel! And we need more of it.

When this issue comes before our Council again it is hoped Carmel lovers will attend the meeting to be sure our traditional style is preserved, not desecrated.

Congratulations on the new Pine Cone!

Sincerely,
WALLACE BERNARD

only in Carmel...

OCCASIONALLY THE Pine Cone gets a little static on the mention of Carmel's Little Old Ladies...sometimes from residents who resent the Village image being made to appear as town-peopled exclusively by elderly widows and retired school teachers. Other times it's from little old ladies who object to being called Little Old Ladies.

Be it understood that the Pine Cone loves Carmel's Little Old Ladies. And surely they aren't all off the same piece of goods. Some are amusing. Some are amazing. Here is one of each.

Incredible, but it happened! An elderly woman remarked, "Isn't it astonishing about those four filling stations on the corners of San Carlos and Seventh?"

When asked why astonishing, she replied, "Why, that each one found its own brand of gasoline when they drilled there!"

Also incredible is Mrs. Frances McCrae, mother of local artist Helen Dooley. Mrs. McCrae is, by her own admission, past 80 years and says she can hardly wait to get to work each morning! She runs Mrs. Dooley's gallery in order to free her daughter for painting. Walks to work, too.

"Mother is reserved," says Helen Dooley, "but she meets people well and is excellent in the gallery."

Mrs. McCrae takes work in stride. The need came young, when her husband became very ill and she had to support her family. As a seamstress, she became alterations woman for a large department store.

Probably not too many of her generation are California natives, but she was born in Visalia.

Mrs. McCrae once took a water color class which her daughter was teaching. "She has much talent," declared Mrs. Dooley, "but no incentive to paint."

SIGNS SEEN: "Put on something warm today...Smile."

THE LIBRARY BOARD has authorized female employees at Harrison Memorial to wear pant suits, so the girls are planning to do their Liberation Thing altogether on the same day.

Well—the Board also gave an Equal Rights nod to male library workers, allowing them to wear kilts. And a Scot in the lot, Robert Lang, is threatening to do just that.

END OF AN ERA? This pastoral scene will soon be disturbed by the bulldozer's roar as 7½ acres in left, foregound will be developed by Arbor Development Co. of Mountain View. Over the strong protests of numerous property owners' associations, the Board of Supervisors voted to commit the property to high-density development. The fate of the other properties along Val Verde Rd., a private road maintained by property owners there, remains a question mark.

Supervisors rezone 7½ acres in Valley to allow 45 homes

In the face of overwhelming community opposition, the Board of Supervisors voted last week to rezone 7½ acres in lower Carmel Valley to permit an increase in density to six units per acre. The property, on Carmel Valley Rd. and Val Verde Dr., was zoned for one dwelling unit per acre.

The board's 3-2 decision will allow Arbor Development Co. of Mountain View to apply for a use permit to construct a 45-unit cluster-type development. The surrounding area, just east of Carmel Rancho Shopping Center, had been designated as a "buffer" zone between the commercial property on the west and the residential property to the east.

Supervisor Willard Branson made the motion to change the zoning after hearing a succession of Val Verde property owners and spokesmen for several property owners' associations voice strong opposition to the proposal. They warned that the zoning change could set a dangerous precedent, leading to high-density housing development for other parts of Carmel Valley now set aside for one-unit per acre residential housing.

Joseph Broadman, a Middle School teacher who has lived in his Val Verde home on a 2½-acre lot for 15 years, likened the decision to "pulling the cork out of a bottle". Before the supervisors voted, he said the rezoning would leave him "no recourse but to sell and get out."

Among the groups who have expressed their strong disapproval of the change in zoning are the Carmel Valley Property Owners Assn., the Carmel Views Property Owners Assn., the Rio Vista Property Owners Assn., the Carmel Knolls Property Owners Assn., the Carmel Meadows Property Owners Assn. and the Carmel Citizens Committee.

Admiral C.W. Fisher, president of the Citizens' Committee, in a letter to the Pine Cone said, "the approval ignored opposition from many citizens and organizations ... we are convinced this population density increase is detrimental. It violates the master plan for this area, and is contrary to the basic rural character of the community."

Declaring that the community was "complacent" in assuming that the Supervisors would repeat their rejection of the proposal several weeks earlier, he called it "one more step toward a Santa Clara Valley type disaster."

Cole Weston, who owns 2.2 acres along Val Verde, a private road maintained by the property owners, said, "I shudder to think of what the area will look like in 10 years if we let this continue."

Supervisor Branson, noting that many hearings on the matter had been held by the board and by the county planning commission, admitted that, "If we grant this, we will set a precedent, but so did man when he built the first house."

In a report to the board of supervisors last July, the Carmel City Planning Commission stated its opposition to a change in zoning for the entire 43 acres on both sides of Val Verde, declaring that the increase "would be detrimental to both the area under consideration and surrounding properties, including those across Carmel Valley Road to the North."

The area immediately to the south of the Val Verde properties will be filled by two high-density developments already approved by county officials over the objections of the City Planning Commission, which has no jurisdiction over the properties which lie outside the city limits.

"Carmel Largo", a 13-acre site would include 92 units of multiple housing. "Riverwood", immediately adjacent to Carmel Largo contains 15 acres; the developer is scheduled to build 150 units on the site.

Voting in favor of the increase in density were Supervisors Loren Smith (Seaside-East Monterey), Arthur Atteridge (Salinas) and Branson.

Supporting what he said was the wishes of the "majority of the people of the area", supervisor Warren Church (North County) voted against it. He was joined by Ellis P. Tavernetti of King City.

the mayor's report

By BARNEY LAIOLO

AT LAST WEDNESDAY'S special meeting, the Council and the Library Board discussed at length many aspects of the library operation. A large map was displayed showing with red tacks the card holders outside the city limits. There are approximately 3800 holders as compared to about 3000 within the limits. That in itself represents an inequity as the burden of cost falls on the city taxpayer.

At this same meeting a notice of intent to withdraw from the County Free Library System and termination of the .07½c property tax was given. This meeting is set for the 27th of January at 8:00 p.m. The Council feels a more satisfactory solution would be for the County to set up a .03½c library tax covering the boundaries of the Carmel Unified School District. This tax would produce a return of about $30,000 which would be a much more desirable approach. People in the area would pay a proportionate share in this case.

It is not the intent of the Council to cut down services or to not serve people outside the city limits. It is merely seeking an equitable return for the service offered. The meeting on the 27th is an open meeting and interested parties are invited to attend.

Also at the last meeting, the Council discussed bids for the purchase of police vehicles. The State has withdrawn its use of supplying cities with automobiles for special use such as police, fire, etc., so we called for bids. I'm glad to report that Cypress Motors of Monterey was low bidder for 4 sedans equipped with special police equipment.

This week I will be in San Francisco to cover two important meetings. The first is with the Post Office Department to continue discussions on the new building. The other meeting deals with the possible purchase of Green Belt land to be purchased by special reserve monies for this purpose. I'll relate to you my findings on both projects next week.

I'M PLEASED to announce that Mrs. Gerry Reeves presented Carmel with a 5x9 American Flag. This flag is to fly atop our flag pole at the Police Station at Junipero and 4th. This is the wish of Mrs. Reeves' father, Col. Gerald D. France, a long time resident of Carmel and one who deeply loved the area. Known as "Papa" to his many friends, Col. France received his M.D. from Ohio State, his postgraduate work at USC and spent his internship at St. Mary's Hospital in San Francisco. He entered the service in W.W. I and remained for 30 years. On retirement he served as Chief Surgeon at the State Hospital in San Antonio, Texas. It is indeed my pleasure to accept this flag and to fly it proudly for all the things he believed in so deeply. Thank you, Mrs. Reeves.

P.S. The attached photograph shows yours truly and ex-Mayor Herb Blanks touring Europe. It won't be long before the Blanks will be back armed with slides and tapes. We will probably have to have a "Blanks Explorama" at Sunset to fill everybody in.

Good health and happiness to all.

Council to decide on withdrawal from county library system

The Carmel City Council, seeking solutions for its costly library operations, meets Wednesday to discuss whether or not Carmel should withdraw from the Monterey County Free Library System.

Withdrawal would terminate the 7½ cents per $100 assessed valuation tax for county library support.

The meeting was called following a special 2½-hour joint session last Wednesday night of the council with the Harrison Memorial Library board.

Councilmen and board members agreed the city needs more support from nonresidents in running the library.

"All we are looking for is an equitable return for the services we are supplying and relief for the taxpayers of Carmel," said Mayor Barney Laiolo. He stressed there is no desire to cut off library service to persons outside of Carmel, but that the city definitely needs county support.

Librarian Vicky Jones recently discovered a little-known section of the State Education Code the council hopes will solve the problem.

The code authorized boards of supervisors to form special taxation districts.

At the meeting, the council authorized a request for a tax district before the supervisors.

A map viewed at the meeting showed a large concentration of library patrons outside the city limits, particularly in Big Sur, Carmel Valley, the unincorporated area around Carmel, Pebble Beach and even Marina.

Non-residents can now use the Harrison library because of Carmel's participation in the county programs.

A new tax district could bring in about $30,000 with a tax of 3 cents per $100.

The tax district can be implemented by the supervisors with a vote by the people.

A ramification of the city's withdrawal could be to cancel plans to construct a new city library at Sunset Center.

If Carmel withdraws, the county will pull approximately 28,000 county books now shelved at the Ocean Avenue facilities.

One of the chief reasons put forth to build a new library is that the present facilities are overstocked with volumes.

'Art for Heart' at MP Museum

Heart patients, physicians or Heart Association volunteers are invited to submit one or more art works for a special hanging at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art.

Works selected for the collection will be hung at the museum in connection with the 1971 Heart Fund campaign during February.

A jury of art experts is being put together to judge the work, of which approximately 40 will be accepted for showing.

Mrs. Joseph Reeves of Carmel, general chairman of the heart drive in Monterey, Santa Cruz and San Benito, has announced that the work will be screened and only the best will be hung.

"Of course, most of those who submit work will be amateurs, rather than professional artists, and that fact will be kept in mind by the judges," she said.

Though the space for the exhibit is most apt for paintings, Mrs. Reeves said that the judges will welcome other kinds of creative work as well.

More information about the competition can be obtained from the Heart Association office in Salinas, 541-A South Main Street, 424-6007.

Carmelo to serve hot lunches

Hot lunches will be available for children at CarmeloSchool for the first time this week.

The first school lunch program in Carmelo's history was approved by the Carmel board of education last week after hearing a report from business manager Walter E. Hinton.

Hinton said the Carmelo lunch program will be identical to that offered students at Woods School in Carmel. All lunches are prepared at the central cafeteria at River School and then transported in compact plastic and aluminum throw-away trays to Woods and Carmelo.

Because Carmelo does not have a cafeteria, until now all children were required to bring their own lunches from home. In some cases this proved an inconvenience or hardship, particularly for families with children who qualify for free or reduced-price school lunches.

The "hot pack" lunches are identical to the meals served children at River School. Supt. of Schools Harris Taylor said that while some teachers at Woods School had complained about the meals, there had been no complaints from children or parents.

Carmelo School students will be asked each morning if they intend to buy lunch, so that the correct number of "hot pack" trays will be prepared and delivered. The cost will be 40 cents, including milk, the same charge as at Tularcitos and River schools.

Under questioning from Trustee James Brock, Hinton said it is not feasible to recycle the aluminum trays because of the high labor costs that would be entailed in scraping and washing them.

Founder of National Alcoholism Council to speak here Friday

Mrs. Marty Mann, world authority on alcoholism, author and founder of the National Council on Alcoholism, will speak at the La Playa Hotel tomorrow at noon when the Monterey Peninsula Council on Alcoholism holds its 20th annual meeting.

The public is cordially invited to hear this outstanding woman. Luncheon reservations may be made at the local alcoholism council office, phone 624-2256. Seating will be provided for those unable to attend the luncheon, but wanting to listen to Mrs. Mann at 1 p.m.

Maj. Gen. Edwin K. Wright, of Carmel, local council president, will conduct the meeting and present his annual report. Three awards are planned. Mrs. Mann will be presented an honorary life membership in the Women's Division of the council by president Ginny Frohman; George Wing, Youth Conference Chairman and Robert Louis Stevenson, Sr., will receive a youth award certificate from Rev. Arthur Cunningham of All Saints Episcopal Church, Carmel; and Council Executive Director Mary Ross will present a special services award to Stephen Ross of Seaside.

Mrs. Mann founded the National Council on Alcoholism in 1944 and since her own recovery from the disease of alcoholism in 1939, has written and lectured extensively at home and abroad.

She is the author of the classic book in the field, Marty Mann's New Primer on Alcoholism, as well as Marty Mann Answers Your Questions About Drinking and Alcoholism.

At the request of the State Department, she was an official U.S. delegate to the 23rd International Congress on Alcoholism in Luzerne, Switzerland. Mrs. Mann is a member of the National Advisory Committee on Alcoholism, a Fellow of both the American Public Health Association and Society of Public Health Educators, and an Honorary Fellow of the American Psychiatric Association.

The objective of the Monterey Peninsula Council on Alcoholism is the mobilization of community resources to bring about the reduction and prevention of alcoholism. Its program is directed at the presentation of facts to encourage discussion and knowledge of alcoholism. It aims to free the disease of taboo and moral aversion which, at present, inhibit professional recognition and treatment.

The intended beneficiaries are not skid-row derelicts, but the 90 percent of the estimated 6,000 alcoholics in the Peninsula area who are members of the middle class, according to the group's brochure.

Election of the local council directors and officers will be held following a report by Raymond M. Smith, nominating committee chairman.

Present officers and executive committee include Maj. Gen. Wright, president, Carmel; Col. James F. Wells, vice president and planning group chairman, Monterey; Rawlins L. Tileston, treasurer, Carmel; Miss Barbara Kynaston, secretary, Carmel; Carmel Martin, Jr., public policy, Monterey; Page Woodard, labor-management, Pebble Beach; Mrs. Frohman, Women's Division president, Monterey; Robert B. Robertson, MD, hospital and medical, Pacific Grove; Rev. Cunningham, education, Carmel; John N. Shephard, legislation and legal, Monterey.

Council staff members are Mrs. Ross, executive director, and William Blauer, deputy executive director.

BABY BOOM

Four local infants were on the stork list for the second week of January—more than usual.

Marie Mitsuki was the first child, a daughter, born Jan. 7 to Mr. and Mrs. John Mockett, who made it to Carmel the long way. He, a native American, and she, born in Japan, met in Vienna, Austria, while both were music students.

A little son, Jacob Matthew, was born Jan. 8 to Mr. and Mrs. Michael Miller of Pebble Beach.

Lt. and Mrs. James Biddle of Carmel welcomed their first-born daughter, Sarah Louise, on Jan. 11. Lt. Biddle is a student at the Naval Postgraduate School.

A son, Jason Todd, is the first child of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lande of Carmel. He was born Jan. 13.

SURPRISE PARTY

His very own wife says Lynn Trosky is known as a "talker." But, she chuckled, "He was speechless when I managed to pull a surprise party for his thirtieth birthday."

Of course she had a little help from her friends—the 20 guests she invited for cocktails. Especially conspiratorial was an out-of-town friend of Lynn's who had never been to Carmel. It seemed perfectly natural for him to lure his host out for an evening-time look at the time, and a short drink at a local pub—while the hostess set the surprise scene at home and bedded down six kids.

Birthday gifts were both serious and funny. An outstanding "joke" present was a Goodwill box.

WINTER B.A. FOR TWO

Diane Bullard of Carmel and Sally K. Griffin of Pebble Beach will be among the Chico State College graduates to receive bachelor's degrees in midwinter commencement exercises this Saturday. Diane's major is social science, while Sally majored in English.

S.F. WEEKEND

The Stuart Blythes spent the past weekend in San Francisco visiting their twin daughters.

THOSE XMAS CARDS

Two Pine Cone readers have come up with ways to dispose of used Christmas cards—without just throwing them away. Mrs. William Strang has decided to send her 1970 ones to Mrs. Ena Douglas-Grundy's son, Benjamin Curry in Ecuador, about whom the Pine Cone published a story recently. Curry distributed one batch to the residents of the rural village, and wrote that the people decorated the walls of their humble houses with the brightly colored cards.

Another reader, Emily Cabral, did some investigating and discovered that Senior Citizens, 700 Jewel Ave., Pacific Grove, will gladly accept any type of greeting cards.

FIRST GRANDCHILD

Mrs. Frank S. Brooks of Carmel happily reported the arrival of her first grandchild on Jan. 7, little Kristin Sue born to Mr. and Mrs. William C. Hunter, III, now of San Carlos.

The baby's mother is the former Kathleen Henderson who grew up in Carmel, graduated from Carmel High School and attended Monterey Peninsula College. Her father is Verne Henderson of Carmel.

The new arrival's father was formerly of Pebble Beach and also attended MPC. He is the son of Mrs. William C. Hunter, Jr. and the late Mr. Hunter.

SOUTHERLY HOLIDAYS

Recent midwinter vacationers at the Santa Barbara Biltmore were Mr. and Mrs. M.L. Storhow of Pebble Beach, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Travers of Carmel, and Mr. and Mrs. Warren E. Wilson of Pebble Beach.

BACK FROM MEXICO

Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Morrow, Jr., have returned from a Christmas-New Year's trip to Mexico which was a sort of deferred wedding trip. They spent two and a half weeks touring Mexico City, Oaxaco, and Acapulco. Their wedding took place Nov. 25. She was the former Mrs. Richard Lofton.

TO LIBERIA

On the strength of his Peace Corps achievements earlier, the younger son of Carmel City Councilman and Mrs. Bernard Anderson, James, is now being trained as an administrative economist in Washington, D.C., for work in United States aid programs in Liberia. He will leave for that African republic March 12.

Other news in the Anderson family is that granddaughter Ginny, daughter of the Andersons' son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. G. Gervaise Davis of Monterey, is still in a "statue of Liberty" cast since she fell off her horse and broke her arm just before New Year's. "You can always tell where she is," smiled her grandpa, "with that arm raised all the time!"

SGT. HARTNETT TO HELP APOLLO

Sergeant Lawrence Hartnett, son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Kimbro of 3616 Comstock Way, Carmel, is scheduled to deploy with his Air Weather Service unit at McClellan Air Force Base, Calif., the end of this month to provide data for the Apollo 14 mission.

Hartnett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Hartnett of 10712 Cambridge, Kansas City, Mo., is an aircraft mechanic with the 55th Weather Reconnaissance Squadron.

Squadron aircrews and support personnel will be strategically positioned around the world to obtain pre-flight weather data for the coming moon-landing mission.

Hartnett is married to the Kimbro's daughter Martha.

The conscience of Carmel

Facing up to library problem

By GUNNAR NORBERG

DO YOU LIVE inside Carmel's city limits? And have you sometimes wondered why it is that people inside Carmel pay so much more for library service than people outside the city limits? (Six times as much, in fact!)

If you do live within the City of Carmel, or if you get some benefit from its city library (the Harrison Memorial), you should save time next Wednesday night to go to the Carmel City Hall (on Monte Verde street, half a block south of Ocean Avenue).

Why? Because that is the date when the Carmel City Council will consider taking an action which most cities routinely take soon after they first become cities. What is the action? To consider relieving people in the City of Carmel from a tax with which few cities anywhere ever burden themselves. That tax is the county library tax, and the present tax, imposed by the county supervisors, amounts to 7½ cents per $100 of assessed valuation.

This tax—7½ cents per $100—is the only library tax which people in the unincorporated areas outside of Carmel, are paying. But, inside Carmel, people are also paying a city library tax which comes to about 36 cents per $100 of assessed valuation, to finance the city's own library (the Harrison Memorial).

Where, you ask, does the "take" from the county library tax go? It isn't always so clear, but very little of it comes back—in dollars and cents—to Carmel's city library. County-owned books are, however, bought with some of it, and some county-owned books are regularly housed or "on loan" at the Carmel library, and borrowers through the years, whether living inside the City or outside, have had equal and free access to them.

This has, also, complicated life for the City's librarians—in many past years—because those were supposed to be the only books—the county-owned books—which were to circulate without a few to adults living outside Carmel's city limits but using the City's Harrison Memorial Library. (There was, however, always a large exception—and one which greatly burdened the Harrison Memorial staff—and that was that all the high school students, whether living outside or inside the city limits, have regularly been issued free "adult" cards. This large exception, made by the city library's own governing board, could at any time—until 1968—have been rescinded, but no thought had been given to its possible elimination, because library board members had felt they wanted to give this service without charge, even though possibly less than a tenth of the local high school students actually resided within the city.)

- BUT LET'S GET BACK now to that January 27th meeting of the City Council which is scheduled to begin at 8 o'clock in the evening at City Hall, and which is being called to decide whether or not to terminate county taxation of city residents for library purposes. If the tax is to be stopped by next July (the end of the fiscal year), the City Council must act to withdraw city taxpayers from its impact by February 1st, according to existing state law.

Today property taxpayers in the City of Carmel are paying one of the very highest library tax rates in the entire State. The combined city-and-county library taxes—at 43½ cents per $100 of assessed valuation—comes to about $25 a year for every man, woman, and child inside Carmel's city limits. (This is four-to-six times the per capita rate in such cities as Pacific Grove, Monterey, Salinas, and Santa Cruz).

If the City Council should decide—and you can help the Council decide by your presence at that January 27th meeting—to eliminate the county library tax for city taxpayers, its next logical step would be to consider withdrawing Carmel from the county-wide (actually two-county-wide) library system. It was when the City of Carmel joined that then county-wide library pool, back in 1968, that the local library had to stop charging anybody any fee for any library card, and as long as it stays in that system, anybody from Monterey or Santa Cruz counties can continue to borrow books without cost at the Carmel library and then return the borrowed books to any other library in the entire two-county area. (The Harrison Memorial Library lost an annual sum of some $1,600 when it had to stop charging the modest sum of $7 a year to those comparative few adults outside Carmel city limits who could not manage to get access to free cards under some excepted classification.)

THERE IS ALSO a deadline date, once a year, by which date any participating city can withdraw from the present joint library pool, which now includes the counties of Monterey and Santa Cruz. That deadline date is April 1st. Whether the City should consider this withdrawal, is likely also to come up for discussion at next Wednesday night's meeting.

For a great many years, there have been intermittent efforts made to try to get some financial support for the City's Harrison Memorial Library, from resident users outside Carmel's city limits. So far, such efforts have not succeeded, whether attempted through the Carmel Unified School District Board of through the County Board of Supervisors.

A special City Council committee (composed of Councilmen Eben Whittlesey and Ken Brown) has been meeting over a period of months, with county officials and with city and county librarians, to try to reach an appropriate fiscal solution to meeting the great and growing cost of maintaining the City's Harrision Memorial Library, on some equitable basis, for people both inside and outside Carmel city limits.

The results of that committee's investigations will be presented at next Wednesday night's meeting, along with any other pertinent information. However the City Council indicated at last week's preliminary joint meeting with the Harrison Memorial Library governing board, that it looked ahead to an expression of views on the library question from users of the City's library at next Wednesday night's meeting. So be there.

(NOTE: Next week the interrupted discussion of Environment & Elections, begun last week, will be continued).

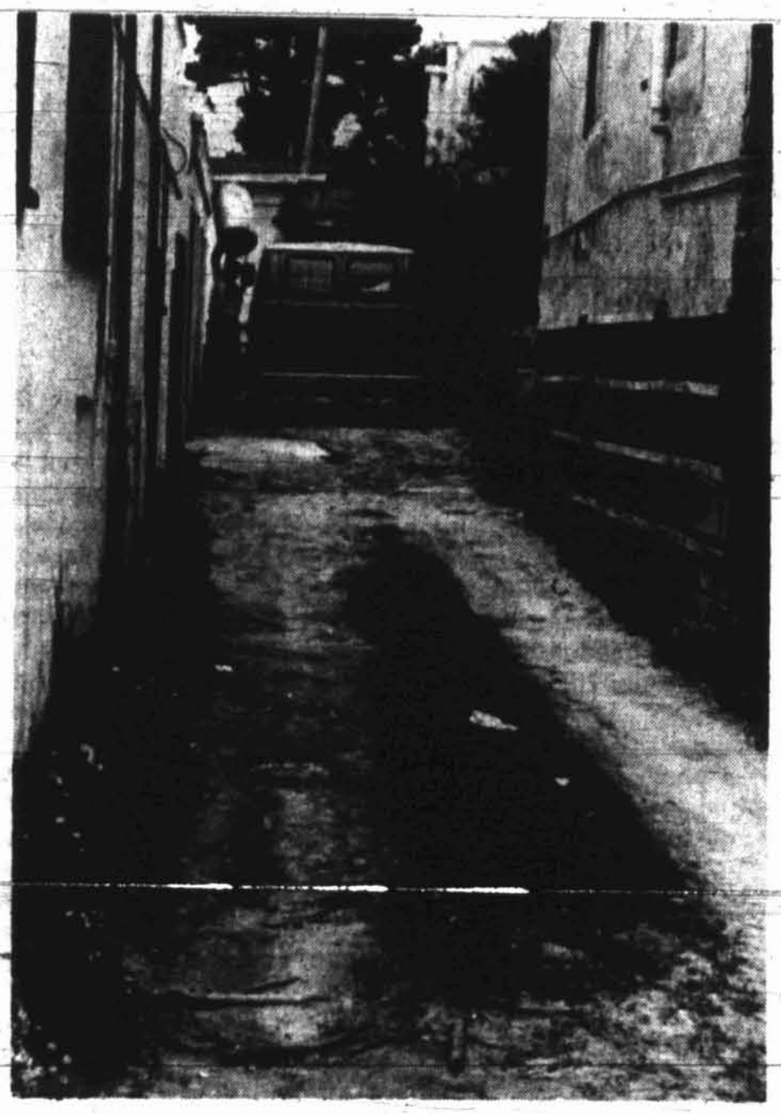
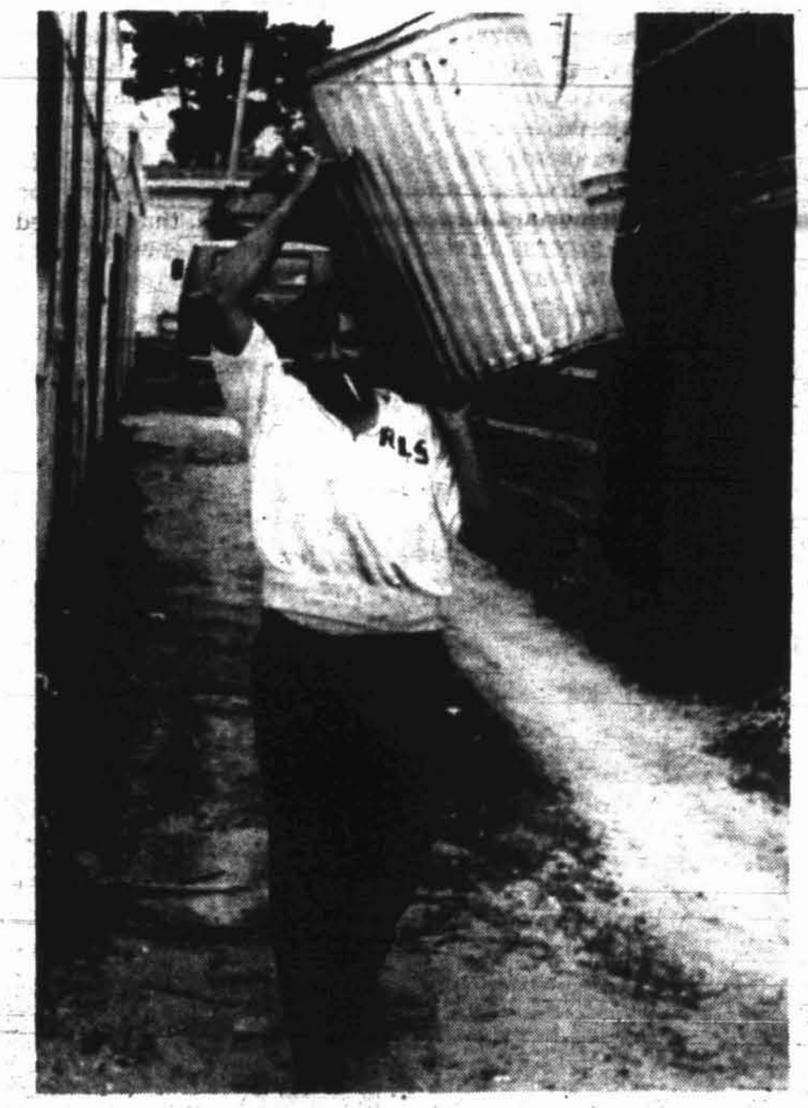
Garbage collection franchise open for bid February 1



JIM KESNER of Roscelli Corp. totes trash down a long Carmel driveway. He must loft the heavy can to clear the delivery van (photo above) before making the walk out (below) to the waiting garbage truck. Roscelli and the city administrator claim time-consuming backyard pickups justify comparatively high collection rates. (Photos by George T.C. Smith)



Provisions to pick up a separate bundle of lawn cuttings are included in Carmel's forthcoming garbage collection agreement.

The proposed maximum charge is $1 per month to pick up one large plastic bag a week.

The agreement also provides for an increase of 50 cents per can in commercial rates.

These are the major changes in the contract, according to City Administrator Hugh Bayless.

The city called for bids for a new 10-year garbage collection franchise last Thursday. Bids will be opened Feb. 1.

The present 10-year contract, held by the John Roscelli Corp. of Carmel, terminates June 30.

Carmel homeowners currently pay $2.25 a month for weekly collection of one can of garbage. The new contract proposes the same maximum rate but includes the provision for the plastic bag pickup.

Currently, gardeners either stuff their lawn clippings in cans or pay additional to have them picked up separately. Roscelli charges $15 per hour for the additional service.

The new proposed maximum rate for commercial customers is $2.75 per can—up from the current $2.50.

"Commercial pickups are generally more time-consuming," said Bayless. "The men have to fight the traffic. We're trying to make people pay for the service they require."

Bayless expected Roscelli Corp. to enter the single bid for the franchise. The company has collected Carmel garbage since the 1920s.

"Roscelli has been a conscientious and dependable organization," said Bayless.

George Roscelli, a partner in the corporation, indicated Monday he approves of the additional plastic bag pickup.

"We talked it over with the city officials several months ago," he said.

Bayless expected Roscelli to bid close to the rates proposed in the forthcoming agreement.

The rates will continue to be high compared with many other central coast cities.

Salinas homeowners, for example, pay $1.75 a month for weekly pickup of three cans—one of garbage and two of rubbish.

However, the company which handles Salinas garbage is currently negotiating a 24 percent rate increase.

In examining the rate increase, Salinas Assistant City Manager John Williams recently submitted a study of rates in neighboring cities.

He found that in Monterey, Gilroy and Seaside, where garbage is picked up by private firms, weekly service for two cans costs $2, $2.25 and $2.15 per month, respectively.

Santa Cruz, Pacific Grove, Watsonville and Hollister provide municipal pickup service. Their rates for weekly, two-can pickups are $1.40, $1.55, $1.70 and $1.75 per month, respectively.

Roscelli Corp.'s Carmel rates for weekly two-can pickup is $4.50 per month. The rate is the same in both the current and proposed contracts.

Mr. Roscelli defended the higher rates on the grounds that Carmel garbagemen work in a more varied terrain than many cities. He also pointed out that Roscelli collectors drive a longer distance to the dump than garbagemen in other Monterey Peninsula cities.

The dump is off Highway 1 near Castroville.

"Our rates aren't that much higher," said Roscelli.

Bayless pointed out that Pacific Grove and Monterey have curbside collection. Carmel's is backyard.

"This roughly doubles the collection time," he said. "This is probably the largest single factor in the difference between rates."

MONTHLY GARBAGE COLLECTION RATES

(Two cans per week, residential)

Carmel (current)	$4.50
(new max.)	4.50
Gilroy	2.25
Hollister	1.75
Monterey	2.00
Pacific Grove	1.55
Pebble Beach	7.00
Salinas	1.75
Santa Cruz	1.40
Seaside	2.15
Watsonville	1.70

Bayless mentioned that Pacific Grove's city collection is partially subsidized out of the Public Works funds.

Pebble Beach's rates are higher than Carmel's, the administrator said. Backyard pickups are standard and require even longer walking circuits than in Carmel.

"Some of those driveways are pretty long," he said.

Bayless thinks Carmelites are generally happy with the city's garbage collection service.

"As long as people want to keep their garbage cans off the street they're going to have to pay for it," he said. "If they get tired I guess they'll let us know."

French Film Festival Feb. 9-11

A French Film Festival offering Peninsula premieres of recently released films which have been highly praised in France and in New York, will be held in Carmel Feb. 9, 10 and 11.

Sponsored by the Alliance Francaise of the Monterey Peninsula in cooperation with Monterey Peninsula College, the Festival offers a rare treat to cinema fans to view outstanding works by some of France's best known film makers.

The net proceeds from the Festival will be allocated to the scholarship program of the Alliance Francaise. Since its inception four years ago, the program has assisted more than 12 students of French, one of whom was given the opportunity to live in Paris.

All of the films are in the French language with English subtitles.

The first offering in the Festival, on Tuesday, Feb. 9, is "La Maison des Bories" (A Stranger in the House), by Jacques Doniel Valcroze. This is a romantic story of a love triangle involving a famous geologist, his wife, and a visitor who creates a situation which resolves itself in an unusual ending.

"Remparts d'Argile" (Ramparts of Clay) will be shown on Wednesday. The plot for this film is laid in Tunisia. It is a highly dramatic story of a young woman awakening to social consciousness in a backward village at the time of the independence of Tunisia and Algeria.

TENSE MOMENT: Matthieu Carriere (l.) portrays a young visitor who upsets tranquil home of geologist Maurice Carrel (rt.) and his wife Marie Dubois in "La Maison des Bories," the first offering in the French Film Festival to be shown in Carmel Feb. 9, 10 and 11. The film was first shown at the Cannes Film Festival last year.

The final day of the Festival, to be held at Carmel's Village Theatre on Dolores, will be highlighted by the presentation of "Le Claiz de Terre" (Earth Light), directed by Guy Gilles. Although different in character than "Ramparts of Clay," this film is also concerned with North Africa.

It is a poignant story of a little boy, who, with his mother and father, is uprooted from his native village, and, in a dreary slum, longs to go back home. Laced with vivid reality, the film features actual people as actors.

All the films will be shown twice daily in matinee at 2 p.m. and again at 7:30 p.m.

Among three other films to be shown with each of the above, is "L'Eden et Apres" by Alain Robbe-Grillet, who made the highly acclaimed "Last Year at Marienbad."

The director of "Ramparts of Clay," Jean-Louis Bertucelli will be in Carmel for the Festival, with other important personalities associated with the French Film Office. They will appear before each performance or during intermission each evening.

Tickets, at $2 for each performance, may be obtained in advance at the theatre.

For further information, interested persons should call 624-3195.

Dimov Quartet to perform here

THE DIMOV Quartet will perform tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. at Sunset Auditorium in a concert presented by the Monterey Peninsula Chamber Music Society. Their program will include work by Mozart, Bartok and Beethoven. The quartet is composed of Bulgarians who have been playing internationally since 1963.

PADRE TRAILS CAMERA CLUB MEETING

An interesting program is promised when the Padre Trails Camera Club meets in Brey Hall, Carmel High School on Thursday evening at 8 p.m.

Members will present pictorial color slides to be judged in the club contest. Each member may submit four slides.

Meetings of Padre Trail Camera Club are open to anyone interested in color photography. Information may be obtained from Galyn Hammond, president. The Club address is Box 4494, Carmel.

CAVALLIERE KETCHUM

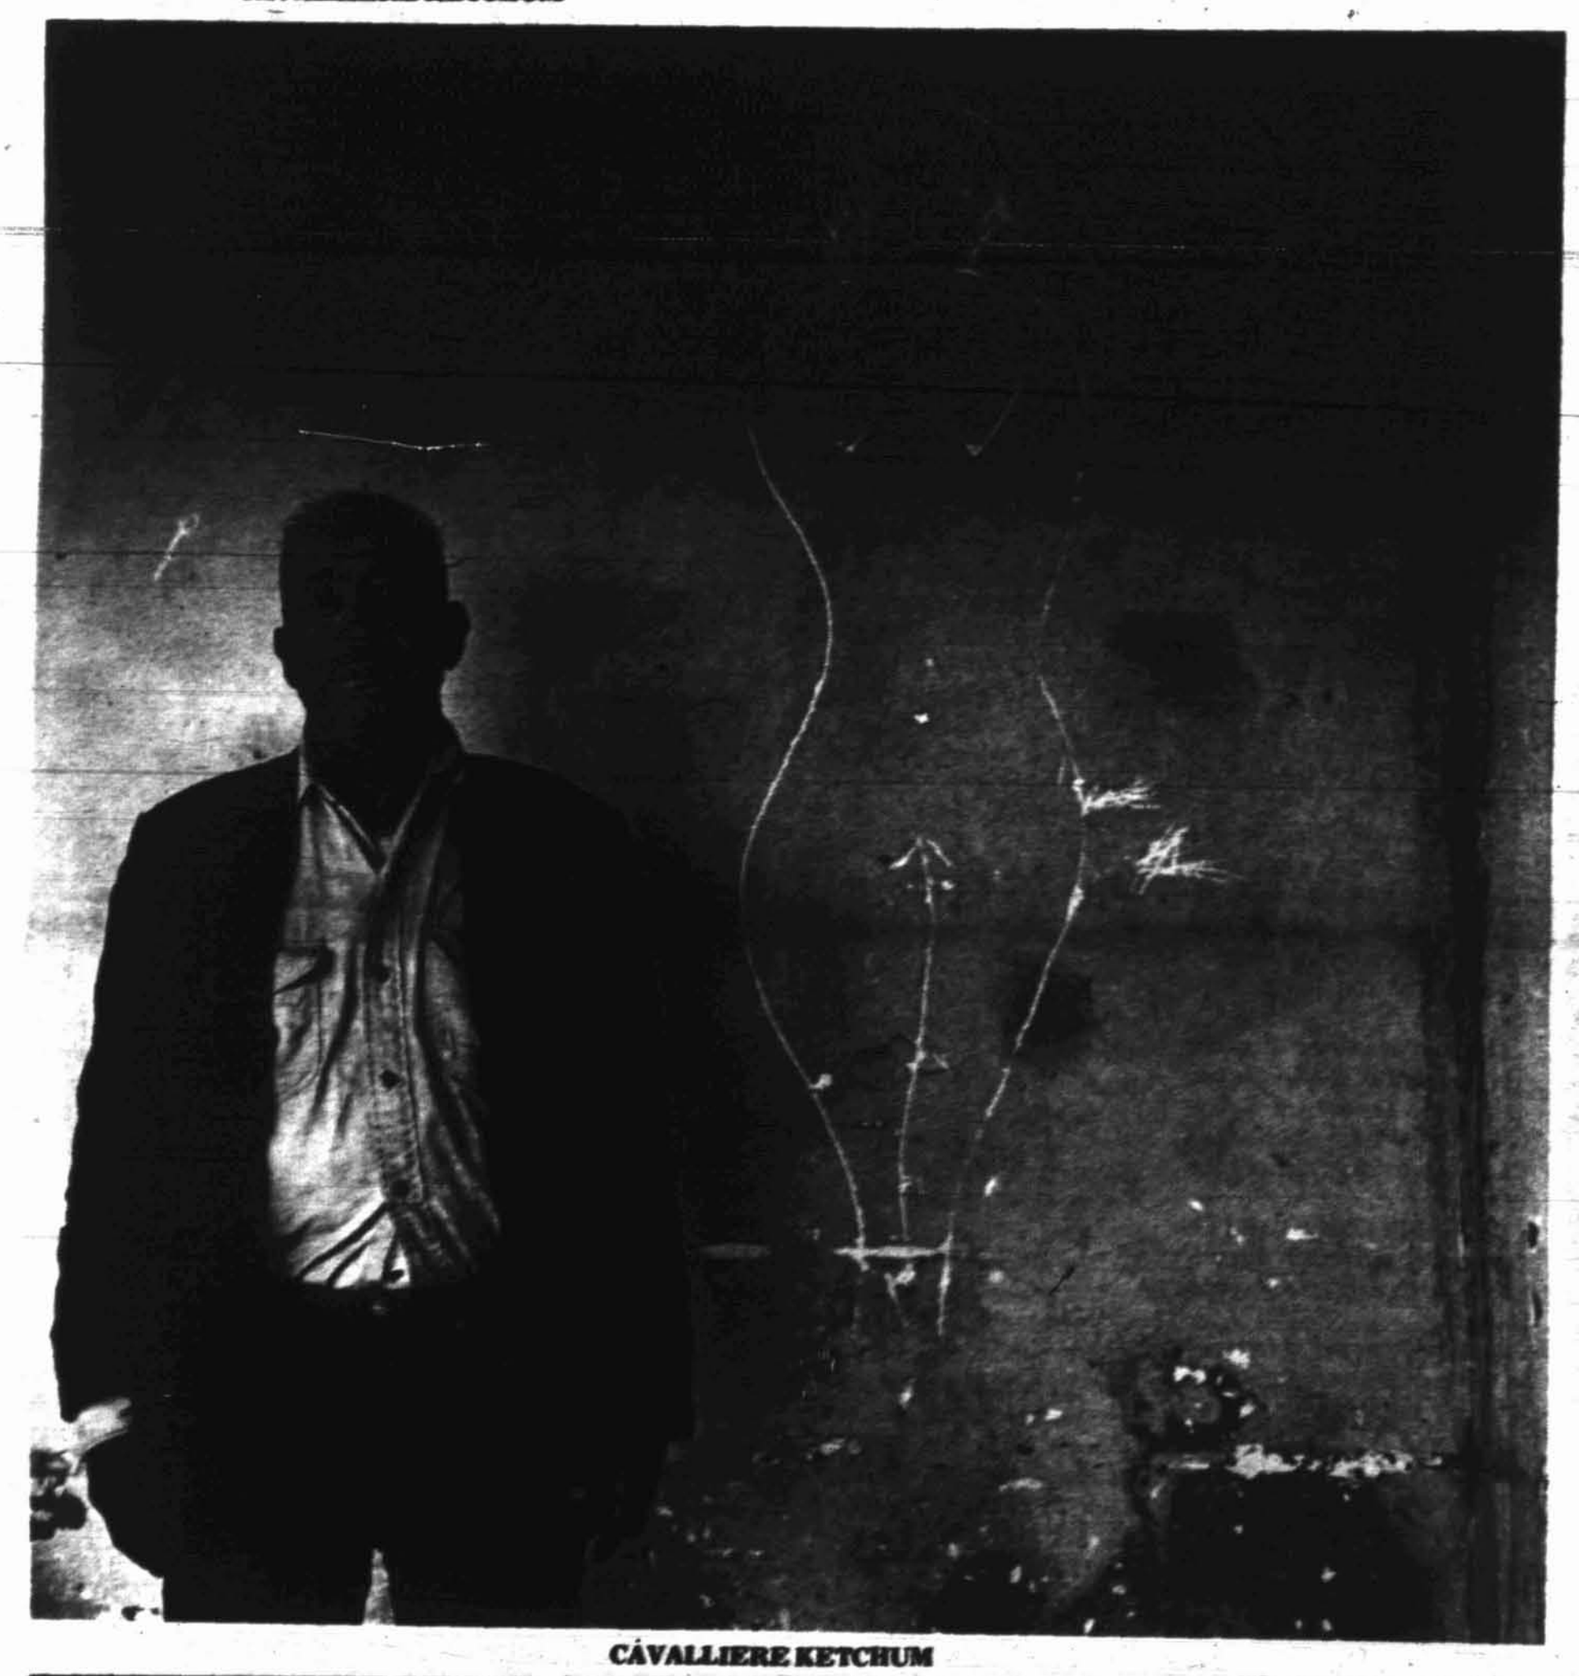
Photographs by two photographers associated with New Mexico will be previewed at a reception tomorrow from 8-10:30 p.m. at the Friends of Photography, Sunset Center.

The exhibit will be displayed from Saturday through Feb. 28 between the hours 1-5 except Mondays.



CAVALLIERE KETCHUM

Cavalliere Ketchum

Cavalliere G. Ketchum, born in North Platte, Nebraska in 1937, spent the first 25 years of his life in Scottsdale, Arizona.

He graduated from Scottsdale High School in 1955, Arizona State University in 1963 majoring in photography and design, and the University of New Mexico in 1970 majoring in photography and minoring in sculpture and art history. He also spent a summer in 1967 at a seminar at the George Eastman House, Rochester, N.Y.

He was a teaching assistant at Arizona State from 1959-62, art teacher at Cortez High School, Phoenix, Arizona, 1963-64, and graduate assistant at the University of New Mexico, 1965-70.

Ketchum's photographs in the exhibit deal with people of the Southwest.

"If you need a statement use this," he says, referring to a statement by one of his camera subjects:

"You know, picture man, these photographs can cause a man to think some funny things. You know, I was happy up here most of my life until I got a TV. I began to watch it, you know, with my family and the more I watched it the more we realized we were—how you call it?—poverty. We had been thinking all our lives we were average people because nobody up here had any more than we did, but those damn photos on the TV made us realize we were poverty. Hell man, that TV made me want to leave this place...and I did, I went to L.A. But after I had been there a while, I decided I would rather be in poverty than L.A., so I came back here and decided to try and make it somehow raising beans and cattle; and you know I didn't think too much of myself for a long time until you started taking these pictures around here, and talking to us, and staying here sometimes. I've been looking at all those photographs you've taken of me and the other people around here and you know I'm beginning to think more of myself. Even if I am poverty you've made me realize I am somebody im...important to myself and I'm important to you. I know that God put me here for some reason, even if it was to grow a few beans...

"Hell man! Those photographs can do some funny things."

Ketchum's photographs have been exhibited extensively throughout the U.S.

His work has been published in The Beginning of the War on Poverty prepared by the Office of Economic Opportunity, Santa Fe, N.M., 1966; "Tour from Albuquerque," Popular Photography Annual, 1968; Modern Photography, July and December 1969.

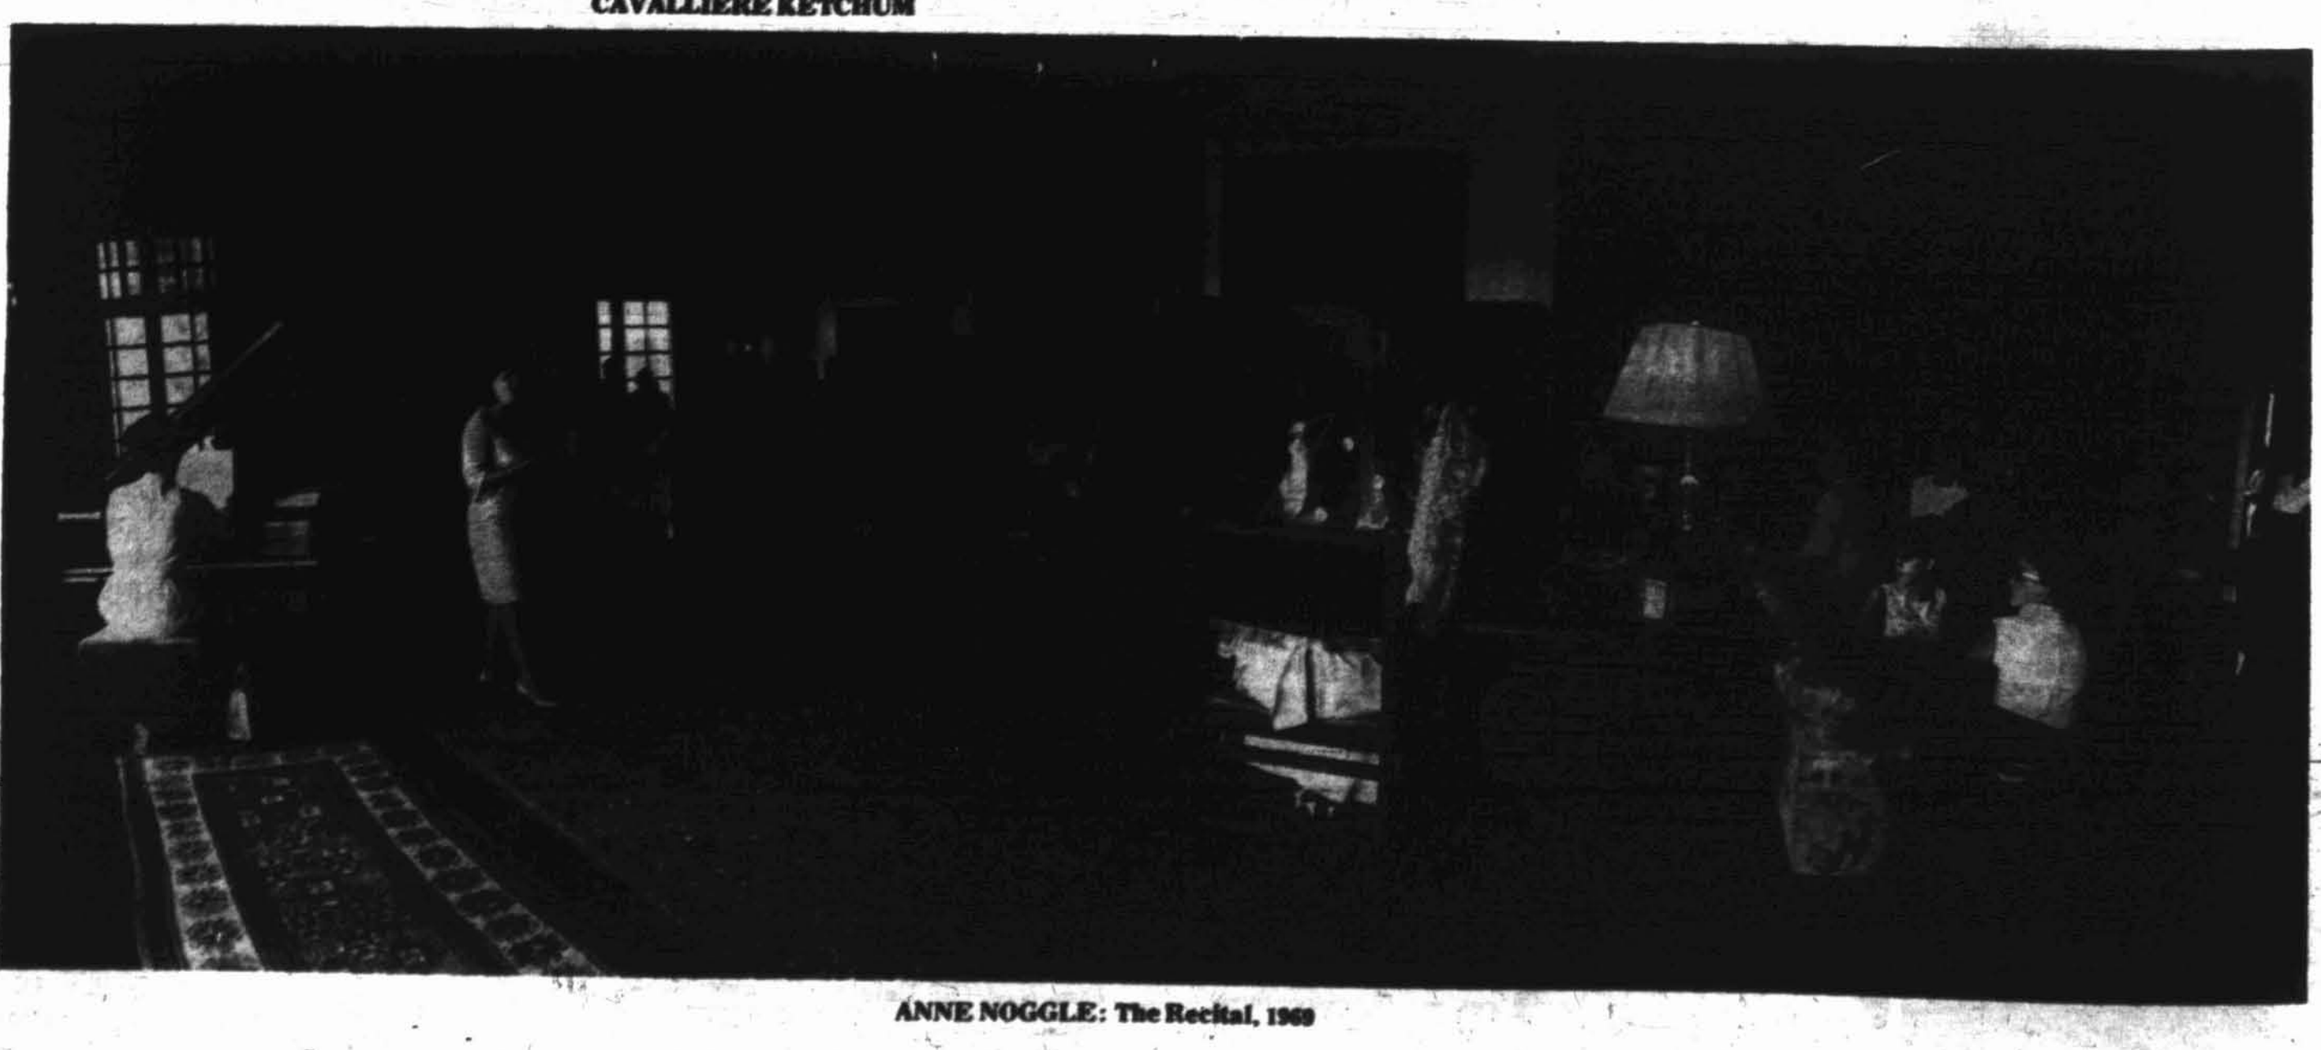
His work is included in the following collections: George Eastman House, Arizona State, University of New Mexico, Museum of New Mexico, Van Deren Coke, Office of Economic Opportunity.



ANNE NOGGLE: The Recital, 1969

CAVALLIERE KETCHUM

Anne Noggle

Anne Noggle, the second photographer, was born in Evanston, Ill., June 12, 1922.

She attended Evanston Township High School where she learned to fly.

She joined the Woman's Air Force Service Pilot program during World War II and flew military aircraft for the Army Air Force, towing targets for aerial gunnery and instructing Air Force cadets in flying.

After World War II Miss Noggle obtained a civilian flight instructor's license and taught flying.

She moved to the Southwest in 1949 and continued to teach flying. She also flew as a crop duster pilot and as a stunt pilot with an air show.

Called to active duty in the Korean War, Miss Noggle served as an aircraft controller. Later she was stationed in Paris, France as a protocol officer.

"I became interested in art at that time," she says.

Miss Noggle retired as a captain in 1959.

She entered the Univeristy of New Mexico in 1960 majoring in art history and graduated with a bachelor of fine arts degree in 1966.

She was awarded a graduate fellowship and taught photography as a graduate student from 1968-70, and received her master's degree in photography in June 1970.

Miss Noggle was appointed part-time lecturer in art at the university in June 1970 teaching photography.

She was appointed curator of photography, Museum of New Mexico, Santa Fe, in August last year.

"The photograph has become, for me, the visual equivalent of poetry," says Miss Noggle.

"During those moments of poetic creativity I still feel a state of grace when word-forming pictures tumble out of my mind's eye and sing in my ears, while I stand for one slight moment at the pivot-center of harmony with all that I don't know but comprehend anyway.

"After the fact, the photographer assumes the role of the prestidigitator, the catalyst. The photograph becomes the protagonist. It is self-assertive and independent. Other people give it other lives. It should no longer need the photographer. So each creation is a spasm of giving, of recognition, of letting go.

"When I photograph, I am not resolving a conflict nor conducting an inquiry. I am not only searching for reality but for meaning. Everything that I am about is also that which I am not about. I am about becoming wise-eyed. I am about heightened sensitivity and comprehension. To take a photograph is an Ode to the Machine; to make a photograph implies a commitment by the photographer to create something uniquely his own—to show through his eyes what he wants to be seen. This is what I am about."

Her work is included in the Fine Arts Museum, University of New Mexico; Museum of New Mexico; Coke Collection; George Eastman House.

Her work has also appeared in U.S. Camera Annual 1971 and Album No. 10 1970.

THE VILLAGE GALLERY on Del Fino Place in Carmel Valley Village had an opening reception Sunday afternoon to honor Man-Ping-Tong-Ting-wah of Kawloon, Hong Kong, who is showing 32 of his Chinese brush paintings there until Feb. 15.

An author of 30 books on Oriental brush painting, Man-Ping-Ton-Ting-wah is a former headmaster of the First Middle College of the Sin Wai district in Kwangton, China, and presently is director of Chinese "Chinese Painting and Poetry", a weekly publication in Hong Kong.

He is a master of traditional Chinese brush paintings. The subjects are delicate landscapes, birds, animals, and still life that interpret Chinese philosophy, poetry and scholarship.

This is his first trip to the United States and combines the pleasure of exhibiting his work and a visit with his son, Henry Tong, a student at Monterey Peninsula College.

The Village Gallery opened last year and is the scene of a great amount of activity. It is owned by Virginia Ford, a painter, who teaches painting in afternoon classes at the gallery. Linda Christie Ford is her daughter, and they both paint and show a wide variety of landscapes, seascapes, portraits and floral studies. There is always something new at the Village Gallery as they feature monthly one man shows by artists from the Peninsula and all over California.

WE HOPE EVERYONE strolled by Malcom Moran's Gallery and Studio window on San Carlos between Fifth and Sixth this week to enjoy his charming, elfin new bronze statues of children, especially created for the Crosby tournament.

This noted California artist has a tender rapport with all the wonders of childhood. His inspiration is his three children, and he interprets their actions with skilled hands. His new sculptures are of children having fun playing golf, with plenty of body English, driving the fairway and putting on the green.

The 12th annual Art Auction to Benefit Beacon House is scheduled for March 21 to 28, at the Outrigger, 700 Cannery Row. A luncheon to consolidate plans and marshall forces will be held Saturday, January 23, with a "no-host" cocktail party at 11:30 followed by luncheon at 12:30.

The guest of honor will be Rene Weaver of San Francisco -- artist, lecturer, teacher and art juror, who will also be commentator for the auction in March.

General chairman for the Art Auction is Mrs. Robert Menist, of Carmel. Co-chairman is Mrs. Andrew Kozak, also of Carmel.

Beacon House is a non-profit center for alcoholics who seek an environment which can give them a start to sober living. It provides residence for men and women, plus guidance and acceptance programs for live-in or live-out participation, as sobriety progresses.

LEE MAICE is the young proprietress of the Maice Gallery, on The Mall, San Carlos between Fifth and Sixth. She is primarily a marine painter, though she also does some highly stylized portraits. For example, one of the portraits presently hanging in her gallery is of an obviously tall man. She makes this effortlessly clear by having a long, narrow canvas. The long body is understated, solid black, while at the top of the picture, the man's face is arrestingly full of character.

Lee says, "I do portraits now and then for a change but I really love the sea and the sun. I like to go to the beach and sketch. I look very carefully, think and enjoy myself, and I always see something new, then I go home and have a wonderful time painting from my sketches."

Painting has always been a part of Lee's life. Her mother is a well known floral painter, who has her own gallery and who is also the president of the El Cajon Art Association in San Diego. Helen Maice, Lee's mother, is thoroughly immersed in flowers. She is a serious horticulturist who has developed a profuse garden that she cherishes on canvas. Some of her lovely floral paintings are on display at the Maice Gallery.

Lee's paintings may also be seen at The Wharf Gallery in Monterey, and if you have the good fortune to be on Maui, in the Hawaiian Islands, The Gallery has several of her sea studies on display. Lee was recently married to Pat Hall, a native of Carmel, who is a chef at the Casa Munras in Monterey.

Festivities reflect greatest Clambake ever!

BY ALICE WOLFE

Now that the dust has settled on what everyone agrees was the greatest Crosby Clambake ever, with the largest attendance, the best weather, and the most jubilant atmosphere, a standing round of applause is due for all those valiant souls who tirelessly outdid themselves to make the Clambake the professionally managed and smoothly run success that we all enjoyed.

The tremendous crowds, the vast amounts of food and drink, and the intricacies of press coverage were amazingly well handled. The Del Monte Lodge and The Beach Club personnel deserve lingering curtain calls. Some of these stalwarts appeared to be "on the bridge" 24 hours a day.

Lee Darragh's labors evoked images of Leonidas at Thermopylae, and Mrs. Edith Clancy was staunch to the end.

xxx

The Friday night dance at the Beach Club was a colorful affair, with an overflow crowd of visitors to the Del Monte Lodge, golfers and members out on the dance floor. Every interpretation of the current fashion mode was visible, from lame midis to conservative evening dress.

Redhaired Mrs. Willard Henry, Pebble Beach, looked smashing in a lavender pantsuit with a fringed poncho. Jean Darragh, wearing a jewel embroidered white silk pantsuit, was a winner for beautiful blondes, and Mrs. Robert Conlan, of Atherton, stole the fashion march with a short gold evening dress, slit to show matching mini-pants.

There are some hostesses on the Monterey Peninsula who could well grace our foreign embassies. By the sheer magnitude and warmth of their hospitality, they cement our relationships abroad and make us all proud, confounding Betty Friedan, and her ilk, who contend that women's work must be outside of the home.

One of these hostesses is Mrs. Don W. Berry who opened her Pebble Beach home last Saturday night for her annual Crosby Clambake dinner party, to fete visiting celebrities and local dignitaries. A magnificent dinner table centerpiece was created for the occasion by caterer Renzo Latone, of Monterey -- a four-foot ice sculpture depicting a large fish leaping out of the water to catch a ball.

This spectacular event was followed by the arrival of a whole roast wild boar, with the proverbial apple in his mouth. He was served with a remarkable eggplant chutney, the recipe for which, is safely in Latone's secret archives.

A partial guest list included Mayor and Mrs. Al Madden of Monterey; Mayor Barney Laiolo of Carmel; Councilman and Mrs. Joseph Ansel, of Monterey and Mr. and Mrs. Franklin de Olivera, Donald Nelson, Ben Groate, Craig Lauderbach, Lloyd Womble, E.H. Bouhaven, D.B. Radford, Dr. and Mrs. E.H. Wedlake, Dr. and Mrs. R.A. Beach.

Also Mr. and Mrs. George Brucatto, Mr. and Mrs. Renzo Latone, Rex Pressey and the Mr.'s and Mrs. Hans Skaalegaard, Ken Greene, Leo Shillam, John Dunn, Jack Waltz, Ed Olmstead, Gene Chovoya, C.L. Brenner, John Catalano, Mike Marotta, Sal Rappa, A.A. Terqueza, George Schroeder, Jeff Stephens, Ted Voigts, Werner Oppelt, Tony Kastros, Jacob Schammas, Dr. and Mrs. Paul Madarasz, and the Robert Francos, John Nails, R.A. Falges, E.A. DeLeves, Thomas Incaviglias, C.T. Hills, Jim Radfords, Nick La Sorellas, Gordan D. Davis.

Also, Harvey Kilpatrick, Don Hamilton, Joseph Walton, Peter Coniglio, Mrs. W.W. Farrish, Mrs. Jackie Ball, Mrs. Jerome Salinger Carlson, Mrs. Patrick Bush, Miss Gigi Meis Winkle, and Miss Judy Marotta.

One of the most beautiful parties that could conceivably be given, and a fitting finale for the rounds of splendid Crosby Clambake galas was hosted by Mr. Jules Steinman, of Los Angeles, and by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Becker, Sunday evening at the Marquis Restaurant in Carmel.

A guest list of over 120 celebrities, out of town-ers, and local residents attended the champagne farewell party. The Marquis Restaurant, owned by Mr. Becker, is famous for its gourmet cuisine, as well as for its remarkably elegant decor.

One departing visitor remarked, "I haven't seen anything like this since Paris during World War I", With fresh flowers everywhere, a softly lighted dining salon, candlelight reflecting on the crystal chandeliers, Mr. Becker, always resplendant is indeed, one of the most gracious hosts in all of California.

Mrs. Palmer tells about life with Arnie

In an interview with the Pine Cone, Mrs. Arnold Palmer happily related what life is like as the wife of the most famous, and probably the most popular, golf professional in the world.

"Winnie" is the perfect wife for a famous man. She is lovely, gentle, gracious and natural. She said, "Three quarters of the year, Arnie travels and plays golf in tournaments. I try to be with him at least a quarter of that time but we have two teenage daughters, Aimie, 14, and Peggy, 18, who need me at home, too.

"When Arnie is home we lead a very quiet life and only visit with our family. We live in Latrobe, Pa., and our house in on the golf course. Arnie's parents live across the fairway, and are a tremendous help to me.

"It is terribly exciting to be on the road and I love it. I like to think Arnie plays better when I am there, but I am not in the least bit superstitious about it. When we are home, we are happiest, and I try to maintain a quiet atmosphere."

When asked if she could recall any funny incidents, Winnie said, "Why there's a funny incident happening right now...that lady is dragging Arnie away. This happens all the time. Yesterday we were in a crowd and Arnie waved and winked at me reassuringly. The lady in front of me was delighted to have caught Arnie's eye, but I didn't have the heart to tell her I was his wife."

Winnie says the Monterey Peninsula is her favorite place to visit; Quail Lodge in Carmel Valley is like her second home.

Benefit concert for Hopkins Marine Station

A music concert to benefit the financially-troubled Hopkins Marine Station will be given Jan. 30 at 8:30 p.m. at Sunset Cultural Center.

The performance has been organized by concerned citizens from the Monterey-Carmel area on behalf of the station, according to Dorothy Bowman, Sunset publicity director.

"The concert is being given in the hope that all those who feel that saving our oceans and environment is important, will join with Stanford alumni to save and develop this illustrious institution," says Mrs. Bowman.

One of the two artists performing is Dr. Welton Lee, violinist, a member of the Hopkins' staff as assistant professor of biology.

Dr. Lee received his B.A. from the University of California and his Ph.D. from Stanford University.

His musical education includes work at the Juilliard School of Music under Dethier and later with Roman Totenberg. He has performed locally on numerous occasions, both as a solo violinist and as a member of various chamber groups.

Camille Olaeta, accompanist for Dr. Lee, is one of this area's best known and busiest musicians. A member of a two-piano team, she has also performed in the Bach Festival, as soloist with the Monterey County Symphony and the Monterey Peninsula Chamber Music Society.

A graduate of the University of the Pacific, Mrs. Olaeta was a pupil of John Gilchrist Elliott. She later studied chamber music with Jascha Veissi and was a member of the Master Piano Class given by Istvan Nadas.

The two artists have been performing contata recitals together for approximately eight years. They have presented programs for audiences at the University of California, Santa Cruz; and the Monterey Peninsula Chamber Music Society.

The Monterey Peninsula Chamber Music Society is sponsoring this concert. For further information call 624-3996. Donations accepted.

Meditation lecture Friday night

David Rosenkranz, 25-year-old resident of Carmel, will give an introductory lecture on transcendental meditation tomorrow at 8 p.m. in Lecture-Forum 103, Monterey Peninsula College.

The lecture, which is designed to explain the benefits of transcendental meditation and to explain its mechanics, will be followed by a four-day course in which an initiate learns the technique of meditation.

The lecture continues one Rosenkranz presented Wednesday at the college and will briefly recapitulate the first lecture's material. It is not necessary to have attended the Wednesday lecture in order to benefit from tomorrow's, explains Rosenkranz.

Rosenkranz recently returned from Estes Park, Colo., where he spent two-and-a-half months training to be a teacher of transcendental meditation under Maharishi Mahesh Yogi.

He has been meditating three years.

He intends to remain in the Peninsula area to continue organizing recently headed by Archie Jones for the International Meditation Society and the Student International Medication Society of the Monterey Peninsula.

He hopes to hold courses at least once a month and to develop regular activities for meditators.

A SPECIAL SERVICE of Dedication and Recital of Music has been planned for Sunday, January 24 at 3:00 p.m. to present the Rose Window to the congregation and public at the First Baptist Church of Carmel on Schulte and Carmel Valley Roads. Hertzog, grandfather of the organist. The glass was executed by John and Wesley Hogan of Los Gatos. They are descendants of the well-known stained glass artist, James Hogan of the Whitefriars Studies in England.

Featured during the recital will be Lyle Richardson, baritone, First Presbyterian Church, San Mateo; Christine Beckstrom, violinist, University of California at Santa Cruz; and Robert Webb, organist; in works by Adams, Bach, Faure, Handel, and Pachelbel.

How can Christian Science help you?

Come to this Christian Science Lecture

"Be yourself!" by Colonel William Little, 12:15 P.M. Thursday, January 28 – Sunset Auditorium, Carmel – Sponsored by First Church of Christ, Scientist, Carmel.

Do you want to believe in God?

You can. Not just because of what someone says about God. But because of what you yourself can learn and prove about divine Love.

Like the woman who was instantly freed by an assailant one night – when she turned to God in prayer. Or the entertainer whose back was healed through prayer after he was told he couldn't walk without surgery.

These individuals found that divine Love meets even the most challenging human needs . . . that powerful spiritual laws are available for anyone to use.

You can learn more of these laws by reading this week's Bible Lesson.

Del Wermuth wins nine-gallon blood donor award

Sergeant Delbert Wermuth, Jr., of the Carmel Police Department has been invited to attend today's meeting of the Carmel Red Cross Board of Directors to be presented with his Nine Gallon Blood Donor pin.

Wermuth became Carmel's second nine gallon donor Dec. 23, just two donations behind his long-time friend Jim Kelsey who received his nine gallon pin September, 1970.

This is a notable achievement as Jim had a considerable lead, starting as a blood donor while Wermuth was in Korea with the U.S. Marines. The fact is that Jim was on his way to the bloodmobile when he learned that Del had been seriously wounded, and, though he did not know it at the time, was receiving considerable blood.

Both Kelsey and Wermuth are "regulars" at the bloodmobiles and as multi-gallon donors have guaranteed the blood needs of themselves and their families for the lifetime of the Red Cross Blood Program.

Both, however, never fail to appear and never fail to inquire if there is a friend, a neighbor or a Carmel resident who has used blood and for whom they may make a replacement.

ORDINANCE NO. 229 C.S.

AN ORDINANCE AMENDING THE GASOLINE SERVICE STATION OVERLAY ZONE LIMITING THE NUMBERS AND LOCATIONS OF SAID STATIONS AND AMORTIZING EXISTING NON-CONFORMING STATIONS

THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA DOES ORDAIN as follows:

Section 1. Section 1305.9 of the Municipal Code of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea is amended by the addition of the following sub-sections:

1305.9.3 GASOLINE SERVICE STATION USE - NUMBER PERMITTED. Due to the small and intimate nature of the commercial district of the City, and the desire to retain its village character, the City finds that an excessive number of gasoline service stations is detrimental to the public health, safety and welfare in that traffic hazards are created by additional off-street automobile entrances and exits, large tanker trucks making deliveries, and street parking of customer vehicles. For these reasons no more than eight (8) gasoline service stations excluding stations incorporated into an underground parking facility shall be permitted after 1 September 1970.

1305.9.4. GASOLINE SERVICE STATION USE-AMORTIZATION OF NON-CONFORMING USES. For the reasons set forth in Section 1305.9.3., and for the further reason that existing non-conforming service station uses depress property values in the commercial district and detrimentally affect the economy of the City, it is hereby determined that the original investment in said uses has been recovered many times over, and that the normal useful remaining life of existing non-conforming service station uses is ten (10) years from the date of July 1, 1970. For the reasons stated, all non-conforming gasoline service station uses existing on 1 July 1970, shall be discontinued and further use prohibited by no later than 1 July 1980.

Section 2. This ordinance shall become effective thirty (30) days after its passage and adoption.

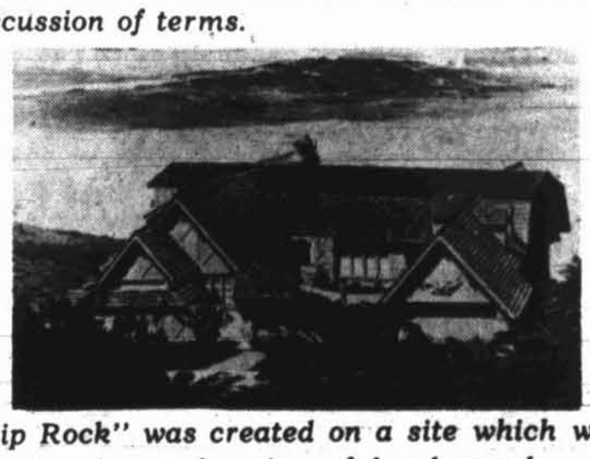
LINES FROM LOIS

If Beauty is truly in the eye of the beholder,

there are a lot of beautiful eyes around Carmel-by-the-Sea! No matter how lovely their own land, visitors try to capture our special beauty on film and take it home with them, as my father is doing in the snapshot above. Some of us paint it, and some of us write about it, and some of us portray in sculpture, and some of us only walk around and admire it -- but all of us are awed by it, and all of us who live here permanently are blessed by it in a most uncommon way.

Here are two homes which participate in this special beauty in a spectacular and graceful way. If you have the means to make it possible to live so completely with the environment you so much appreciate, you will want to consider these unusual dwelling places as possibilities for your next home.

"Case del Puente" could be on the Riviera or the Costa Brava or any famous coastline of the world. Fortunately, it is on the coast just five miles South of Carmel. The handsome residence in its dramatic setting contains around 4000 square feet living area to take full advantage of the unmatched setting. Protected garden patio, unusual plantings, heated swimming pool, dramatic lighting -- all create a special enhancement of the site. Call for a brochure and a discussion of terms.



"Ship Rock" was created on a site which was long the dream location of local people who studied every fascinating aspect of its unusual spot on a cove, looking directly at Pt. Lobos. Lovingly planned, meticulously built, beautifully appointed. There is probably not another home in the area, as young as this, which so fits its site that it seems to have been there for years. May we show it to you? You will not easily forget your visit!

In one of Walt Whitman's notebooks, he said: "I believe that WHATEVER happens I shall not forget this earth." Carmel's beauty makes it seem a likely statement indeed!

Sitting on the grass is legal now!

BY GARY FRANTZ

Tuesday morning was lustrous with that incredibly balmy weather experienced in Carmel early this week.

Devendorf Park, usually so chaste one wonders that the bees bother to pollinate the fuchsias and chrysanthemums, stretched under the attentive sun. The perpetually cropped grass coursed with juice. A few remaining untoxified beetles reeled delightedly in the heat-catalyzed fragrance.

City Forester Bob Tate, looking boyish and amused, stood on the street sidewalk of the Junipero side of the park nodding his head to words spoken by Councilman Bernard Anderson. Anderson, standing erect with his arms crossed over a massive chest, looks healthy and vigorous. His shirt is red-checked and short-sleeved. With the forester and councilman is an unidentified wrangler in a scroll-brimmed cowboy hat.

At the entrance to the sidewalk which carries spectators through the heart of the park, white signs neatly lettered in black still proclaim their negations, illegalities, don'ts, warnings and restrictions:

NO DOGS ALLOWED. (Regardless, one town notable can be seen regularly leading his dog on a sniffing-relieving sortie around the flower beds.)

UNLAWFUL TO SIT OR LIE ON GRASS.

What?

Then why are those people, that guy with the grey beard and the two nymphs, not only lying on the lawn, but painting pictures on each others' forearms with felt-tipped pens while they giggle licentiously?

What is this?

"The park's been liberated," say the nymphs, rolling over lazily in the grass. "Yes."

Indeed, for a period, people will actually have the chance to again sit and lie on the lawns of Devendorf Park.

The California Supreme Court ruled Monday that the 1968 city ordinance which outlawed such activities is unconstitutional.

At the time the ordinance was passed, "an extraordinary influx of undesirable and unsanitary visitors to the city, sometimes known as hippies," was observed by the city council.

"Unless proper regulations are adopted immediately, the use and enjoyment of public property will be jeopardized if not entirely eliminated," the council decided.

Ann Parr, a Carmel book dealer, was arrested Aug. 19, 1968, for sitting on the grass during an assembly to protest the ordinance.

Mrs. Parr contended the ordinance was unconstitutional and petitioned the Supreme Court for a writ to stop the lower court from proceeding with her trial.

Associated Press reported from San Francisco:

"In a 4-3 decision written by Justice Stanley Mosk, the court held that the ordinance violated the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment.

"The majority held the equal protection guarantee was violated when the city signaled out a social group and stigmatized its members as 'undesirable and unsanitary'.

"The court said, 'The Carmel City Council made no effort to define the term hippie, so as to limit the application of its hostile rhetoric to persons who are engaged in illegal conduct. Rather, the council made pejorative reference to the entire class of youthful Carmel visitors whose mode of dress and life style differ from and irritate the majority of the residents and tourists in the city.'

"It added, 'This court has been consistently vigilant to protect racial groups from the effects of official prejudice and we can be no less concerned because the human beings currently in disfavor are identifiable by dress and attitudes rather than by color.'

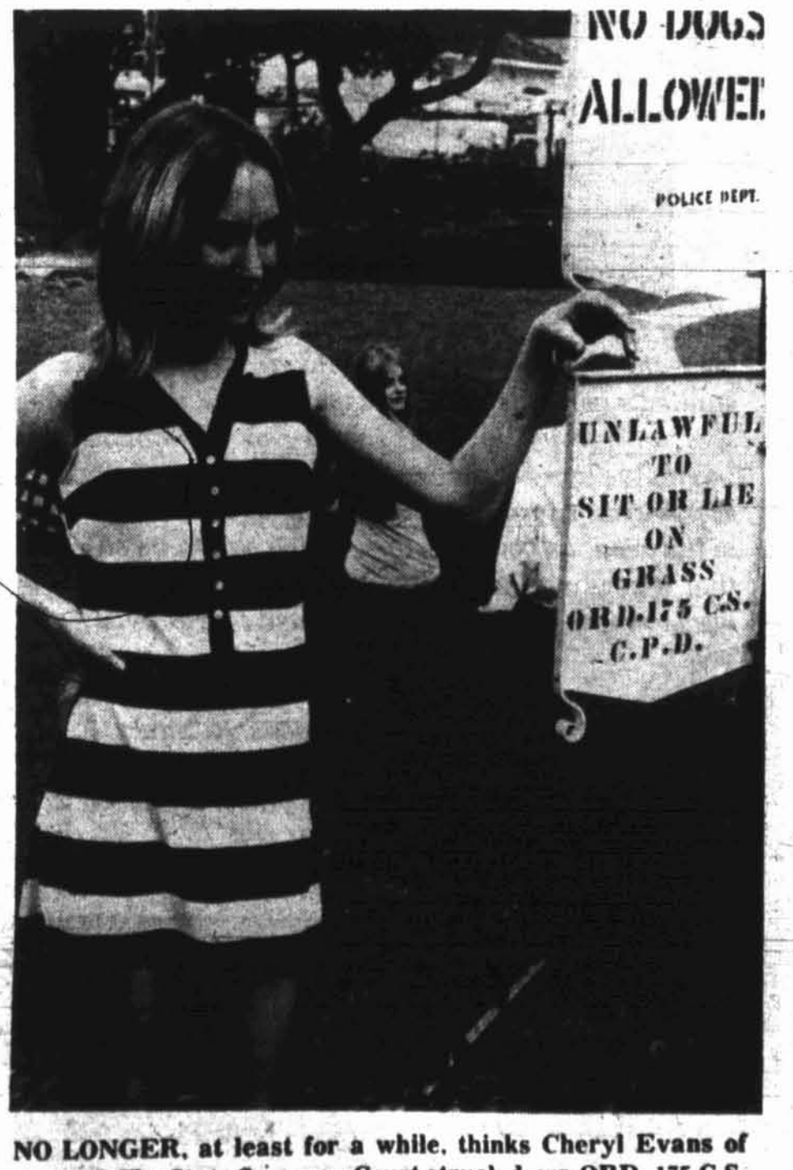
"In a minority dissent, Justice Louis H. Burke wrote that 'the unfortunate result of this rash holding is to invalidate, in its entirety, comprehensive and urgently needed legislation aimed at preserving one of California's most attractive communities.'

"He said it was unfair to penalize the city 'merely because the declaration harmlessly, though perhaps unfairly, characterized as "undesirable" and "unsanitary" those persons who, by their conduct, created the urgent situation which the ordinance was designed to correct'."

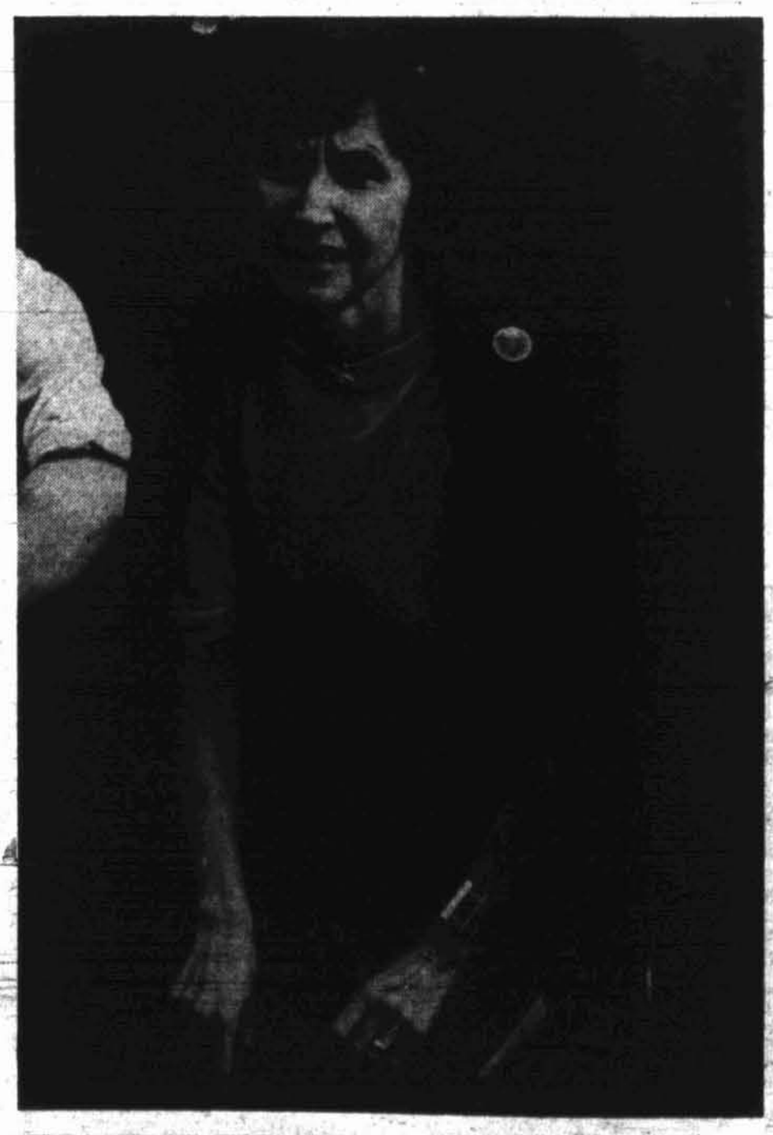
The city council has not yet responded in action to the court's decision.

City Administrator Hugh Bayless suggested the council has two possible courses: to appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court or to write a more tidily worded ordinance.

Gather ye rosebuds while ye may.



NO LONGER, at least for a while, thinks Cheryl Evans of Carmel. The State Supreme Court struck down ORD. 175 C.S.



CARMEL BOOKSELLER Ann Parr challenged as unconstitutional a city ordinance making it unlawful to sit or lie on public lawns. She won.

Gladys McCloud: A modern-day old-timer

The Carmel Pine Cone

SECTION II

By JUDITH A. EISNER

Although Carmel was founded in the early years of this century, and its true old-timers are now octogenarians, there is another group of dedicated Carmelites who rank as modern day old-timers. They came to Carmel just before or during World War II and have stayed through the years, working in and for the city they chose to call home.

Gladys McCloud belongs to this group.

A neat, vivacious woman in her mid-fifties, Gladys has a warm and ready smile and deep blue eyes. As she talks, her alert eyes survey her shop and her head of grey curls keeps turning to follow the activities of salesgirls and shoppers.

Gladys, her husband, Walter, and their two young daughters, Susan and Sarah, were sent to the Peninsula by the Navy 28 years ago this month from Hartford, Conn. Walter was the first line officer at the Navy pre-flight training school which took over the old Del Monte Hotel.

That was in 1943. Gladys didn't go into business until 1947, but the idea behind her shop was germinating.

She found, with two young daughters, that she couldn't buy clothing for them anywhere in Carmel, and decided to open a business that would remedy that situation for other local mothers.

In 1943 Gladys recalls that there were several vacant shops along Ocean Avenue, but war rationing of textiles prevented her from going into business immediately.

By 1947, the war over, she was finally able to get the merchandise she needed; but during the war boom, the vacant stores had all filled. She had to buy out an existing business just to get its location, on Dolores just south of Ocean.

"I knew that Ocean Ave. was the place to have a business, even then," she says. "As soon as the store became available, we moved to our present location." The large shop was, for many years, the only store in Carmel to boast a freight elevator.

UNCHANGED

Although styles have changed through the years, the basic precept behind Gladys McCloud has remained unchanged. In addition to carrying girls' wear in sizes 7 through 14, they stocked junior sizes, teen and pre-teen, and eventually little girls' and toddlers' clothes.

"We always catered to a younger shopper," says Mrs. McCloud, "although many women have always come here. But we are not a true misses store.

"I've always kept our clothing within a moderate price range and go to considerable lengths to find just the right goods."

How important have tourists and visitors been to the success of the business?

"I can't deny that they contribute," she says, "but I want to make it clear that we couldn't exist without our local Peninsula business. We have so many people who come from a 25-75 mile radius whom we consider our regular customers. You know," she says, "the majority of businesses in Carmel didn't open to cater to the tourists, and our local businessmen are very grateful that Carmelites trade with them."

Gladys has had a long-term vested interest in Carmel's development. Active in business and community affairs, she was the first woman president of the Carmel Business Association, serving from 1961-63, and is a member of the Board of Directors of the Carmel Foundation. Her involvement in Carmel dates back to her first years here.

"When we came here at the beginning of the war, Carmel was even more a small town than it is today. It was a wonderful place to be alone—when the husbands were away. There were all sorts of things to become involved with—Red Cross work and civic affairs and school and PTA. It was a good way to get acquainted."

Today, like so many others, she is concerned about what she sees as a downhill trend in the quality of Carmel.

"I've had any number of people—both residents and visitors—speak to me of the changes that have taken place in the shops on Ocean Avenue. Much of what they say is not complimentary," she says solemnly.

COOPERATION

"The business people are condemned an awful lot," she continues. "But the Business Association has not had the cooperation of the city council in the past that we are grateful to have now."

GLADYS McCLOUD

When Gladys talks about a downhill trend in the businesses of Carmel, she is referring to blatantly tourist-oriented shops that cater to Carmel's young transient or "hippie" visitors.

"I think it's a shame that people eat and drink and discard food and wrappers on the streets," she says sternly. "It's the younger element who patronizes the take-out eating places, not the residents or more sophisticated visitor.

"Carmel is known for its art galleries and its music. The people who are interested in these things still come here—and I think more and more will come.

"These visitors object to the hippie type of transient. They always complain to me, especially in the summer."

Gladys doesn't have any answers to the problem, except that perhaps hippies can be discouraged by eliminating the businesses they frequent.

Although she feels it is the city council's task to safeguard the character of the town, she looks to another group for help.

"Until the landlords of these stores want to help maintain the standards, we're not able to keep out undesirable businesses," she says thoughtfully. "Only the landlords can legally regulate this by refusing to rent to the wrong type of business."

Another problem that has bedeviled Carmel for years is the ubiquitous parking problem. Here, Gladys sees two inexplicable factors at work. One pertains to tourists.

"We're always complaining about our parking problem," she says, "yet the tourist who comes to Carmel for cultural reasons is welcomed although he contributes to the parking problem. Why, we're packed here during the Bach Festival!"

PUZZLE

Welcoming tourists even while you bemoan the crowded conditions they create is one puzzle of the parking problem. The other is the selfish businessman.

"I simply can't get over the abuse of some of the business owners who park their cars on the streets in the business district!" she says hotly, "while their fellow businessmen are making every effort to improve the situation.

"Have you noticed the parking lot at the old Purity Market?" she asks. "I've been watching it since the market closed. Every morning by 8:30 the lot is jammed, and it's full all day long. It proves that we need off-street parking. The cars in the Purity lot belong to Carmel businessmen who want to avoid taking up the available street spaces," she finishes.

In addition to hoping for solutions to these problems, Gladys has two wishes for Carmel she would like to see come true.

"I hope the business area will never be allowed to expand," she says. "Carmel is definitely 'over-stored' now for the number of residents and visitors and there is talk of more shops coming in."

She looks up. "Carmel Plaza cannot be stopped at this point," she comments, "but no more after that...We should not allow any changes in our zoning to permit expansion of the business district."

Her other wish is for annexation of interested areas contingent to the city limits.

"When we moved here, our home was just outside the city limits. We worked hard to annex our area.

"The people who live just outside the city limits say they live in Carmel; their address is technically Carmel, but they aren't really Carmelites. They take from the city, but give nothing to it—and many of them want to belong.

"Why can't an organization like the Carmel Citizens Committee help these areas in their attempts at annexation?" she asks. "These people would profit from annexation through better police and fire protection and Carmel would profit by being able to tap their personal resources."

Gladys McClous looks around at the shop that bears her name.

"I think," she says wistfully, "that if people would be courteous and considerate of each other, if they would help and work together in cooperation with the C.B.A. and the Council, we could solve all our problems. We could all keep our shops and we could also keep Carmel."

THE PHONE BOOTH

Maybe you didn't know that everyone from Pacific Telephone who visits your home or business carries an official identification card. These ID cards show each employee's name, photograph and signature. So if you ever have the slightest doubt about anyone who says, "I'm from the telephone company," just ask to see proof. Our employees will be more than willing to show you their identification.

If you have relatives or friends living in your home, they might appreciate having a separate listing in the phone book. Especially if their last name is different from yours. A separate listing makes it easier for friends to find them and costs just 35¢ a month. It's easy to arrange. For more information, call us here at the Business Office and talk to your Service Representative.

It's surprising how a person's voice can sound different over the phone if the mouthpiece is held too far away from the lips—like under the chin or touching the forehead. For best results it's a good idea to hold the mouthpiece directly in front of your lips—about 1½ inches away. Then when you talk as you normally do, the person on the other end will hear and understand better—and you'll sound like you.

It's time again to start thinking about next year's telephone directory. Yellow page advertisers in the Monterey directory will be contacted starting this week. The last day new or revised advertising can be accepted is May 13, 1971.

BY JUDITH A. EISNER

We spoke with a woman last week who had been told that her beautiful, dearly loved eight-month-old German Shepherd bitch had hip dysplasia. She was understandably upset and wanted to know more about the disease.

We have written before about hip dysplasia by way of warning prospective puppy buyers of its high incidence in many of the larger breeds.

Hip dysplasia is a congenital malformation of the hip joint. It is not contagious, but is inherited. Although it is difficult to describe without pictures, we will try to simplify the condition:

The hip assembly in dogs is known as a ball-and-socket joint. The end of the thigh bone (femur) is a round, smooth "ball;" the socket in the pelvic bone is a round "cup". The head of the femur is supposed to fit snugly into this socket. Muscles in the pelvic girdle help support this arrangement. The thigh bone should rotate freely in the pelvic socket.

In congenital hip dysplasia, malformations occur in either the ball or socket. Imagine that the ball is flattened at the top; or that the socket, instead of being round and cup-like, is flattened to a shallow curve. You can see that the thigh bone can no longer be snugly cupped in the socket and that it is free to slip and slide. Additional complications with hip dysplasia come from arthritis or osteomyelitis (an infectious inflammatory disease of the bone).

Hip dysplasia is a condition found mainly in large, fast-growing dogs. It is rarely encountered in small dogs (they have other problems).

The Orthopedic Foundation for Animals rates hip dysplasia on a scale of 1 to 5, from clear, sound hips to extremely displastic. The only certain way to diagnose hip dysplasia is to have a veterinarian radiograph the dog's hips, a procedure usually done under general anesthesia.

Symptoms of hip dysplasia may appear as early as five or six months of age in affected animals. There may be lameness in the hind quarters, apparent pain when the rear is touched or pressed, strange gait including swinging of the rear legs, reluctance of the animal to sit, hobbling, bobbing or lurching in the rear. When you see a badly dysplastic dog, you know something's wrong with his hindquarters.

Unfortunately, dysplasia usually cannot be accurately diagnosed until the dog is almost one year old. That makes it difficult to choose a puppy from a breed with a high incidence of dysplasia. Similarly, the only prevention is to breed only from stock that has been certified free of hip dysplasia by OFA, as it is inherited. The pet buyer's best safeguard is to insist that the parents and grandparents have an OFA rating of clear hips.

Sadly, there is little that can be done for the dysplastic dog other than making him as comfortable as possible. There is a surgical procedure involving cutting off the head of the femur and then wiring the bone to the pelvic socket, but it is extremely risky and the incidence of success is low.

If you suspect that your dog is having problems in his rear legs and he is a large dog, especially a German Shepherd, we suggest you pay a visit to your veterinarian for complete diagnosis.

Veterinarians recommend the use of mild pain-killers (aspirin and mild barbiturates) to keep the animal comfortable and restricted physical activity. Displastic dogs should be discouraged from running and jumping.

If you have a puppy of the larger breeds, there are some things you can do that may possibly avert future hip problems.

-- Keep the puppy on the lean side. Overly fat, "butter-ball" pups are no longer considered healthy pups. Excess weight tends to put a strain on rapidly growing bone, muscle and forming joint structure.

-- Discourage the puppy from jumping and leaping up to avoid placing strain on his hindquarters. The best exercise for a growing pup is regular, sustained walking rather than breakneck gallops and races.

-- Feed a good diet, high in protein (meat, cottage cheese, cooked eggs, lean cooked fish, milk) and be sure your pup is receiving sufficient vitamins and minerals. Large puppies are literally "building bone" as they grow; they require lots of calcium and phosphorus and vitamin D to build strong bone. Don't give your pup a "shotgun" dose of vitamins; check with your vet about what he needs and see that he gets it.

If you learn that your dog has hip dysplasia, follow your vet's recommendations. Many dogs are only moderately affected. Given proper care, they can live happy and normal lives.

Should you be faced with the sad realization that your dog is severely crippled and in acute pain, there is only one humane thing to do: put him painlessly to sleep. Only selfishness can keep a sick, crippled and pain-ridden animal alive. Unfortunately, hip dysplasia does not get better; and it can degenerate progressively as the animal ages.

A reader phoned about our description of "pig dogs" as hound and terrier crossbreeds, worrying that her Airedale Terriers might be confused with these killers. She rightfully described the Airedale as a cross between the Old English Terrier and the Otter Hound. However, we did not mean Airdales were the culprits; had we meant it, we would have said it. And we trust she can now walk her pets in peace.

Pomona College Glee Club here February 2

The Pomona College Glee Club will appear in concert at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 2, Carlos and 9th, Carmel.

The Carmel concert, which is open to the public, is sponsored by the Pomona College Alumni Assn. and the Monterey Institute of Foreign Studies. Admission is $3 for adults and $1.50 for students.

The concert is part of the Glee Club's mid-year concert tour, which this year includes nine concert appearances in high schools, colleges, churches and community associations in Santa Barbara, Mountain View, Danville, Berkeley, San Francisco and Los Olivos. The Pomona College Glee Club consists of a combined Men's and Women's Glee Club with 59 voices.

In addition to the evening concert, the Glee Club will give a concert at 1 p.m. for the combined student body of The York School, Monterey, and the Santa Catalina School for Girls. The concert, co-sponsored by the two schools, will be held at the Santa Catalina School, Mark Thomas Dr.

The concert programs will include sacred and secular choral music.

Selections will include the Bach motet, "Jesu meine Freude;" the "Three Shakespeare Songs" by Ralph Vaughn Williams, composed for the British National Competitive Choral Festival in 1951; Monteverdi's haunting madrigal with string accompaniment to a sonnet of Petrarch, "Hor che'l ciel e la terra," and the motet "Sensus spei" by Karl Kohn of the college music faculty.

The Women's Glee Club will sing Schubert's setting of the Twenty-third Psalm, and the Men's Glee Club will perform Walter Piston's "Carnival Song" with piano four-hand accompaniment.

Traditional songs of collegiate conviviality will include "Ergo Bibamus," drinking song on a poem by Goethe, as well as student serenades and selected college songs.

The Blue and White Quartet, Pomona's male foursome will balance the concert music with songs of mischief and humor.

Among notable performances of 20th century music by the Pomona College Glee Club have been the premiere of the Stravinsky-Bach "Von Himmel hoch" variations at Ojai in 1956, the American premiere of Milhaud's "Guillen Poems" in Los Angeles in 1959, and the performance of Stravinsky's "Les Noces" at the 1967 Ojai Festival under Pierre Boulez.

Following the evening concert, an invitational reception will be held for alumni, parents and music patrons. Invitations have been extended to alumni, parents and music patrons in Carmel, Monterey, Salinas, Seaside, Watsonville, Santa Cruz and other surrounding areas.

Further information may be obtained by calling Mrs. William Wheaton of the Monterey Institute at 373-4779, ext. 51.

Transportation study completed; Sacramento studies data

The Salinas–Monterey Area Transportation Study (SMATS) has completed its seven-month-long series of home interviews.

Approximately 270 households were interviewed in Carmel, according to H.R. "Ole" Redden, study coordinator.

"There will be no further home interviews by SMATS personnel," said Redden.

Preliminary data from the traffic origin-and-destination survey indicates an average daily total of a little more than 570,000 individual trips within the SMATS area (all of Monterey County from Chualar and Point Soberanes north to the county line).

The figure includes both driver and passenger trips in commercial as well as private vehicles. Most of these were made in the urban areas.

Some 7,649 households, including single-family homes, apartments, mobile homes, barracks as well as permanent residents of hotels and motels, hospitals and convalescent homes, were interviewed.

These represent 10 percent of the total number of homes in the area.

Information compiled from the home interviews will be processed in Sacramento by the Division of Highways and returned in late spring for use by local planning and engineering staffs.

Travel recorded by SMATS will be related to land use in the area and then used to provide projections of future transportation requirements. Some of these projections extend in 1995, said Redden.

...Votes $1,500 to pay lobbyist

Local school board opposes state-wide school tax

The Carmel school board last week decided to help pay the services of a Sacramento lobbyist in an effort to fight off a state-wide school tax that could, if passed, force the district to double its tax rate.

The board voted to spend up to $1500 for a lobbyist who will represent Carmel, Beverly Hills and other high-income, basic aid districts.

At issue are various tax reform proposals which will come before the state legislature this session. Most of them include some form of state-wide tax to help finance education on a state-wide basis.

Last year, one measure called for a $2.88 state school tax. According to Supt. of Schools Harris Taylor, the money raised from the Carmel School District would be used elsewhere in the state, and Carmel, which receives minimum per-pupil allocation from the State, would not benefit from the tax.

Since the present Carmel school tax is $2.99, a state school tax of $2.88 would leave the district with 11 cents on which to operate -- an obvious impossibility. The alternative would be for the district to raise its local tax rate by $2.88 -- a painful and perhaps equally unrealistic proposal.

The powerful California School Boards Association is supporting the idea of a state-wide school tax as the only fair way to provide equal educational opportunities for children living in communities that can ne[illegible] support adequate school programs. The Carmel district is a member of CSBA, but, in this case, must look elsewhere for someone to argue its case before the lawmakers.

Trustee Steven Sassoon noted that this stand by the CSBA was precisely why he had voted against renewing membership in the organization last fall.

Board president Richard Wilsdon said that while Carmel and the CSBA are at odds on this issue, the CSBA provides other services which are helpful to the district.

PESSIMISTIC

A somewhat pessimistic note on the future tax situation was voiced by Trustee Hilton Bialek, who told the board he thinks a state-wide school tax is "inevitable."

"The basic aid districts are smaller districts," Bialek said. "I don't believe (a lobbyist) is going to have any effect. In principle I'm in favor, but practically I'm afraid it won't do any good."

Trustee James Miller said he felt $1500 was a comparatively small investment to make when considering the amount of money that could be siphoned out of the Carmel school district for distribution elsewhere.

In other matters, the school board:

1. Hired Mrs. Susanne Howard and Mrs. Patricia Skinner as physical education teachers for Carmel High School. Mrs. Skinner will replace Phyllis Gray, who is going on leave, for the remainder of the school year.

2. Announced that April 20 is the date for an election to seat three members of the Carmel school board. The terms of Dr. Hilton Bialek, Steven Sassoon and Richard Wilsdon expire on June 30. None have said if they plan to stand for re-election. Nomination papers may be filed through Feb. 25 with the County Superintendent of Schools.

3. Accepted the completed audit by the firm of Heckenlaible-Apger and Company for 1969-70 and authorized payment of $3,100.

4. Accepted with gratitude the gift of a Bell and Howell 8mm film projector and editing kit made to Carmelo School by Mr. and Mrs. Donald G. Hubbard.

5. Heard a report from student board member Doug McCall on environemntal projects at the high school. McCall said the district is now using a biodegradable insecticide, has traded in one 8-cylinder driver's education car for a smaller 6 cylinder model and has co-operated with students in cleaning up rubbish tossed down a hillside behind the pottery building.

McCall said that he and several other students have volunteered to clear out poison oak and shrubs which constitute a fire hazard behind the high school. Eventually, he said, students hope to plant trees and maintain the area as a park.

Padres defeat San Lorenzo; face Marello, King City this weekend

Carmel High School's varsity basketball team battles for first place in the Mission Trails League this weekend as they play Marello tomorrow and King City Saturday.

The rapidly-jelling Padres carry a 2-0 win-loss league record into the contests after defeating San Lorenzo Valley 77-62 last Friday.

Forward James Thorne, a six-foot, four-inch junior transfer, scored 36 points against the valley team to tae the league lead among individual scorers. He is averaging 27 points a game.

The Padres have the opportunity to capture at least a share of first place this week. They share a 2-0 win-loss record with King City and Palma.

Marello lost both its opening league games, the latest to Pacific Grove 85-45. Carmel opened the league season two weeks ago beating Pacific Grove 77-55.

The San Lorenzo game was close until the fourth quarter. Valley lead 17-12 at the end of the first quarter, Carmel 36-31 at the half and 46-45 at the end of the third quarter.

The Padres reduced the first quarter deficit [illegible] pressing.

Thorne scored 11 points in a row early in the fourth quarter to break open the game.

"He hit everything he threw up," said the pleased Carmel coach, Dick Charles.

Thorne was successful with a phenomenal 72 percent of his shots for the game.

He played a superior game to Valley's Roger Carr, said Charles. Carr, who stands six feet, five inches tall, is considered by many observers the best player in the league.

"Our defensive job on Carr and Thorne's shooting were what won the game," said Charles.

Carmel's tall front men continued to contribute the most points.

Forward John Neale added 13 and center Steve Hiaasen 8.

"Our opponents continue to press our guards," said Charles. "I guess they figure they have to put the pressure on somewhere. It's kind of a farce. Kevin (Cunningham) and Jimmy (Conlan) are the best pair of guards in the league – maybe not individually but as a pair. They work so well together. We give the ball to Kevin and he just brings it on through. Our big men down at the basket just lay it in. Neale and Thorne score half their points on layups."

Other Carmel scorers were Cunningham 8, Conlan 4, John Engstrom 3, Tony Lucido 1 and David Calloway 2.

Also playing were Jerry Argust, Carl Merlo and Kevin Kelley.

Kelley and Calloway are freshmen who are new to the team.

"We'll see if we can't give them a little experience," said Charles.

Carmel has a young team overall. Two regulars are sophomores and four juniors.

Charles also expects the Carmel freshman team to win the league this year.

The Padres record for the year now stands at 5-4. They have won their last three games.

City fathers want more light on lighting

The city council is currently considering upgrading city street lighting.

Councilman Frank Falge wants to make sure that the new lights shed a more natural light than is provided by existing mercury lamps.

"That greenish light makes people look very bad," he says. "Mercury lamps are all right for big cities like San Francisco. But I think our lights ought to make people a little more natural looking."

Falge and Councilman Bernard Anderson, who compose the council's Committee on Lands and Improvement, are studying the matter to present to the council at their next regular meeting, Feb. 3.

"I think there should be more investigation of the types of lighting available before starting the project," says Falge. "There are some new sources, a combination of mercury and other elements, which provide a more natural color."

The councilman also suggests a close look be taken at the additional expense posed by mercury lighting.

Sunrise to Sunset

As this week's column looms on the horizon, I'm seeking new frontiers of activity to report to you—our friends of Carmel—and the surrounding communities. Pondering the events of the coming week, I am reminded that we are frequently asked, "And what is Sunset Center doing for the youth of Carmel?"

Just in case this question has also crossed your mind, you might be interested to know that during this very week, the finishing touches are being added to the gymnasium; the floor has been shorn of its ancient shellac and new guide lines drawn up for the Physical Fitness program about to be launched by Mr. Morales under the sponsorship of the Carmel Police Department. These activities are geared to attract our young men from mid-teens to middle twenties!

And speaking of the gym and adjacent corners, the former cafeteria harkens our youth every Saturday evening, 7:30-11:00 p.m. as our folk dance instructor, Albert Daoud, leads a clapping good line to the lively strains of Greek, Israeli, Irish—you name the country—they have the music.

Mission Street is becoming a beehive of activity these days as Lilli Selvig instructs her ballerinas in the fine art of her profession. Her superb knowledge and endless enthusiasm is an inspiration to every one.

Not to leave our "little ones behind," Diane Chatwin, an expert in her chosen field—Modern Dance—corrals these young potentials every Tuesday afternoon in studio 13 from 3-6 p.m. teaching creative rythmns to the five and six year olds and seven to twelve year olds.

While still on the subject of body movements and physical fitness, I must remind you of our yoga classes in studio 8 as Lori Kuhns relates quiet meditation with a yoga for health program for adults and teens. Or, if you find yoga is not your cup of tea, Lilli Selvig has a creative exercise class every Monday and Wednesday mornings from 10:30-11:30. Although this class is now filled, you may put your name on the waiting list.

All this week, mid sun, cold, and rain, our corridors were filled with laughter and light as the multi-purpose room provided shelter to our Girl Scouts after a heating problem drove them from their little blue bungalow on San Carlos. These elementary to Junior High girls are an eager group, boundless in their enthusiasm, with energy that can't stop. As you may note, there is a great variety of youth activities about and we shall anticipate more in the weeks to come.

Not only do we hope to expand our events for youth groups, we are also happy that many adult activities are scheduled at Sunset and more in the planning—everything from the Chamber Music Society, January 22nd; Explorama, January 28th and 29th—"High Himalaya"—to the Carmel Music Society on February 18th.

If adult classes in the arts and crafts are to your liking, we would be pleased to enroll you in the new etching class beginning this Wednesday, 7:30-10:00 p.m. as taught by Peter Plamondon; or Robert Horne's Painting and Drawing Workshop on Tuesday and Thursday; or Life Drawing on Friday mornings. Carol and Hamilton Brown have not returned from Houston and have opened their doors to sculpture classes every Tuesday.

If you are a browser, not a doer, remember the excellent photographic displays in studio 1 - Tuesday through Sundays, 1-5 p.m.

Before closing, I want to remind you once again of the violin concert, Jan. 30, presented under the auspices of Monterey Peninsula Chamber Music Society, featuring Dr. Welton Lee, accompanied by Camille Oleata. We hope you will reserve this last Saturday in January, for all are giving of their time and effort for a very great cause—saying the Hopkins Marine Station. Dr. Lee is assistant professor of Biology at the Station.

Until next week—happy days,

DOROTHY BOWMAN

Woman's Club to hear talk on Ethiopia

Mrs. George B. (Kate) Dietterle will address the Carmel Woman's Club at 2 p.m. on Monday on "Ethiopia - The Hidden Empire" and what brings it into current news.

The University of California requested Mr. Dietterle (former principal of Seaside High School) to spend two years in Ethiopia as an Educational Consultant to the Peace Corps which at that time had about 500 teachers there. The Dietterles were based at Addis Ababa, the capital, but his duties took him to distant areas where the Peace Corps Volunteers were serving, and for the first year she accompanied him in a Land Rover. She also traveled to Kenya and Tanzania.

The second year she served on the faculty of the Haile Selassi University in the School of Social Work.

Mrs. Dietterle will appear in her authentic Ethiopian costume and will show artifacts and fabrics depicting the art and culture of that country.

She is known to the Peninsula as a landscape arthitect and artist.

Pouring at tea will be Mmes. A. Gordan Bagley, Clifton H. Beckwith, Frank G. Born, Viola Mills.

Hostesses will be Mmes. Jesse C. Cross, Lauchlin M. Currie, William Holzhauer, Lewis Hulse, C.B. Ninekirk, Charles N. Pearson, Edna S. Preble, James H. Price and Arthur Templeman.

Remember When?

50 YEARS AGO:

From the Pine Cone, Jan. 20, 1921:

Bob Leidig says that if the Seals train at Monterey, he will organize a Carmel team of baseball players to trim the San Franciscans.

Mr. and Mrs. J.V. Rittenhouse gave a dinner last week at their home at Pebble Beach, at which they entertained Mr. and Mrs. William Jones of Tacoma, Mr. and Mrs. Byington Ford, Mr. and Mrs. C.S. Stanley, Colonel and Mrs. David L. Roscoe and Miss Marian Baker.

A prominent Eastern glass manufacturer last week, seeing the mountain of pure white sand, near the old Powers' place, he remarked, "If we had that in Chicago, we would be millionaires."

In order to expedite a discussion which has arisen regarding the official name of the picturesque cape which marks the southwest point of Carmel Bay, a member of the Pine Cone staff visited the office of the Coast and Geodetic Survey in San Francisco. There it was learned from official charts, one of which is now on exhibition in the Pine Cone office, that the official name of that locality is Point Carmel.

On page 77 of the United States Coast Pilot, published in 1917, at the Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. is printed, "Point Carmel, the southern point at the entrance to Carmel Bay, is an irregular, jagged, rock point, 100 feet high."

Davidson's Coast Pilot, published in 1889, also gives the name as Point Carmel, and in a foot note states that it was once, locally, known to whalers as Point Lobos.

At the Geodetic office it was learned that a triangulation station was established on a southeastern point of Point Carmel which was called Point Lobos, but on the completion of the surveys that station was abandoned.

The southern point of the Golden Gate, at the entrance to San Francisco Bay, is officially designated Point Lobos.

25 YEARS AGO:

From the Pine Cone, Jan. 18, 1946:

Fire Commissioner Frank Hefling pointed out yesterday that tomorrow has arrived for all those well-meaning but forgetful citizens who have met him on the street this week, said, "Oh, that reminds me, I want to donate to the fund to buy the volunteer firemen a radio-phonograph," reached into their pocket, said, "Darn, I haven't any cash on me but I'll be around tomorrow."

The Carmel Art Association's new watercolor show, hung in the George Beardsley Memorial Room, features many new works by the new members of the Association. Among these are Dorothy Stover, Albert Carter, Bob Vestal, Joe Moody, Kay Talbot, J.H. Newbury and Gerda Mora.

The Buick sedan owned by Miss Dodie Davis caught on fire Wednesday evening as it was driven into the garage on Lobos between First and Second. Carmel Volunteer Fire Department extinguished the blaze before more than $75 worth of damage was done.

Serra School Notes ... I had a lot of fun when my mother went to San Francisco. The lady next door took care of us. She has a baby about eight months old. He loved to see us blow bubbles. Every night we had a little party. We would blow bubbles, pop corn, and roast marshmallows. -- Deborah MacAdams, 4th grade.

10 YEARS AGO:

From the Pine Cone, Jan. 19, 1961:

There have been several daylight robberies in Carmel and on the Point in the past two weeks, according to Police Sergeant William Ellis. The thieves have walked into unlocked homes, carried off such items as transistor radios, cameras, watches, piggie banks, wallets containing larger sums of money, and packs of cigarettes.

On January 28, Carmel will be the location for Honor Orchestra and Honor Choir performances, according to John Farr, Carmel High School music instructor.

Tonight, a group of Carmel Highlands property owners will meet with Dr. Richard Weigle, president of St. John's College, Annapolis, Maryland, to discuss the Marx property in Gibson Canyon as a site for St. John's west coast campus.

The meetiing will take place at the home of William K. Stewart, president of the Carmel Highland Association, its purpose, to discover the reaction of the neighboring property owners to the proposed development of the site for college purposes.
